3 digester proposals received

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

HARRISBURG — Only three proposals have been received by the Governor's Energy Council in a cost-sharing fund project to study the feasibility of farmers joining together in a cooperative methane digester system to generate power from manure.

Friday, March 9, was the deadline for farmers, farm groups, agribusiness or alternative energy firms to submit proposals to the Council.

"The proposals are now under review by a panel," said Linda J. DeLiberty, program coordinator.

It is expected that decisions will be made shortly.

The Council had hoped for more proposals, particularly since more than 100 requests had been received for copies of the regulations concerning submitting proposals.

While declining any specific information since the proposals are under review, the Council did report that all three submitted proposals involve proposed projects in the Lancaster County area of the southeastern part of the state.

Under the Council cost-sharing program, the state would provide 80 percent of the cost of a feasibility study, up to a maximum of $10,000. The funds, totaling

Guernsey Breeders discuss sale of Lancaster pavilion

BY LAURA ENGLAND

DANVILLE — Albert Hack, Pennsylvania Guernsey Breeders president, said he wished his association's report could be brighter, but the fact remains that a decrease in herd numbers was noted in 1983, and the fiscal year ran into the red ink.

Hack, addressing the 53rd annual meeting of the Association held March 9 and 10 in Danville, said herd numbers have dropped from 96 in 1979 to 84 last year. He added that changes have been made to cut costs but "we're still running into red ink."

These changes include cuts in travel expenses and the number of employees. Employees are also working out of their homes, business manager Lee Yost said, and this has helped.

"I don't mean to paint a black picture on our association," Yost said. "We do have money. The association isn't broke, but it's a question of the directors putting the assets into the best use."

It is this question of where to place the assets in terms of use and importance that has brought mixed emotions among the Guernsey breeders

One asset is the Guernsey Pavilion, located east on Route 30 in Lancaster. The association has been offered $800,000 for the building. This amount, along with $150,000 offered for the Chambersburg office, would bring a total $950,000 into the association which would go towards operating expenses and breed programs.

The question is, should the Guernsey Pavilion be sold?

Association member William Cannon, who has been studying the issue, says yes. "The selling of the Guernsey Pavilion would be a salvation to our breed and our association," he said.

The building is in an ideal location for the sale, Cannon said. He also added that one board member said "we need the income more than the building."

Cannon suggested that if the building is sold, the association could possibly use the Penn State

Lehigh Valley

Successful year cited by co-op

BY LAURA ENGLAND

LANCASTER — Another year of financial success was reported by Lehigh Valley Farmers treasurer Robert Gehman as the cooperative increased both its milk sales and membership during 1983.

Speaking at Lehigh's annual meeting held Tuesday at the Host Farm, Lancaster, Gehman said the cooperative marketed 841 million pounds of milk last year valued at $117,280,000. The sales generated a net margin of $2,215,000 which will be ditributed to members.

Gehman said $841,000 of the net margin will be distributed as certificates of equity. Quality notices of allocations, totalling $1,099,000 and cash dividends of $275,000 constitute the remaining net margin.

Lehigh Valley Farmers, under a 15-year long term contract, ships all its milk to Atlantic Processing Inc. (API), a dairy cooperative federation. Lehigh supplies 65 percent of API's milk with producers in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Maryland.

Although the principle supplier for API, Lehigh needs more members to meet the cooperatives needs, membership chairman Max Sumser said.

"API needs more milk," Sumser said, "and we need 350 new members to meet its needs. We have the will and resources to do this."

Membership did increase over last year by 15 percent, Sumser said. The number of members jumped from 1,139 producers in 1983 to 1,309 in 1984 for a total 170 new members.

Looking for additional members in 1984, Sumser said Lehigh has initiated a membership drive

Jack Hubley named to Lancaster Farming staff

LANCASTER — Joining the staff of Lancaster Farming as an associate editor this week is Jack Hubley, a Lititz resident and graduate of Warwick High School.

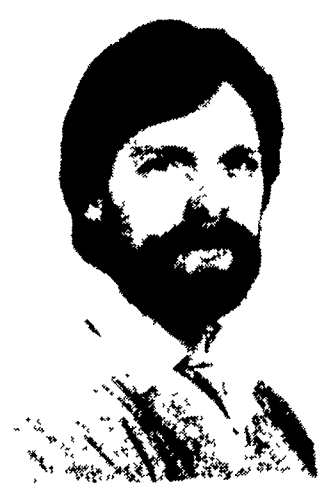
Graduating from Lebanon Valley College in 1973 with a Liberal Arts degree, Hubley began exercising an interest in writing during his senior college year, selling his first magazine article in April of 1974.

Since that time he has written for numerous outdoor periodicals on both the national and regional levels.

A member of the Pennsylvania Outdoor Writer's Association, Hubley is currently the outdoor columnist and feature writer for the Lancaster Sunday News.

Also recently, he has served as a part-time agribusiness writer for Lancaster Farming.

A lifelong resident of Lititz, Hubley is the son of John A. and Dorothy G. Hubley. He currently resides at 707 E. Millport Rd., with his wife, Christina, a teacher, and two-year-old daughter, Amber Elizabeth.



Jack Hubley

In his spare time, Hubley enjoys hunting, fishing, weight lifting, and nature photography, which he has displayed in local photography shows and in slide presentations for various organizations.

With Laura England assuming dairy responsibilities, Hubley will be handling a variety of assignments, with an emphasis on livestock reporting.

E. Lancaster nutrient studies expand

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

TERRE HILL — A detailed study of manure and fertilizer nutrients in the soils of Eastern Lancaster County by Penn State soil scientists will be expanded during the coming year.

Focus of the studies are the amounts of nitrogen and phosphorus being applied to the land and where they are going.

Heading up the studies – now in their second year – is Dale E. Baker, professor of soil chemistry and coordinator of Chesapeake Bay projects at Penn State. Also taking part from Penn State are soil scientists Richard H. Fox and Les E Lanyon.

Working closely with the soil scientists are Donald M. Robinson and Robert H. Anderson, adult farmer instructors in the Eastern Lancaster School District.

At the core of the studies will be a detailed tracing of manure and fertilizer nutrients, particularly.

–How much is applied and is started with at the beginning of the growing season

–How much becomes available to the plants as they grow and is used up.

–How much is left over after harvest and where it can go over the winter.

Concern over the excess nutrients that may be in the soil beyond what the corn or other plants need is two-fold – the nitrates and phosphorus can find their way into underground water supplies and farmers' wells or into streams and down the Susquehanna River to the Chesapeake Bay.

Baker and other participants in the studies met with Eastern Lancaster County farmers who are cooperating in the studies at a session in the Union Grove Alternative School on Wednesday night.

During the coming year studies are being expanded to more farm locations and becoming more detailed as additional federal monies are being allocated for projects involved in the cleanup of the Chesapeake Bay

Test sites will be expanded to 30 farms this year, compared to 22 last year. In addition to soil sample testing, plant tissue testing will be done to determine how the plant is

Delmarva Poultry

Thursday, March 15
Report supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Movement on ready to cook whole birds was a little better today but still remains fair in most quarters. While current production is clearing, there remains some additional products available for sale. Cutlets are irregular as some plants are short while others have an adequate supply. The balance of items is clearing reasonably well under a fair demand.

Slaughter schedules are moderately heavy. Live supplies are adequate. Weights are desireable in most quarters. Undertone is generally steady.

Today's L.T.L. asking prices are unchanged on U.S. Grade A at 62-67 cents.

Estimated slaughter of broiler fryers in Delmarva (000).

Estimated 3/15 1,862; Actual 3/8 1,861; Actual 3/13 1,870; Average Weights 3/13 4.23; Average Weights 3/6 4.37.

Ag Week - Ho Hum

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

Agriculture now has a special week to launch its busy season in spring and a week to wind things up in the fall.

Ag Week is now under way and includes Ag Day on Tuesday, the first day of spring. Then after the harvest, there's Farm-City Week about Thanksgiving time.

Like the multitude of other weeks and days that are proclaimed in this country, the general public probably receives these two ag events in much the same way -- with a yawn and hardly a passing glance

And as far as having any lasting impact on agriculture or helping to solve some of its problems, they have about as much influence as any of the other special observances proclaimed by special interest groups

I'd like to suggest that a few other ag weeks or days be proclaimed during the heart of farming's busy season and not just at its beginning and end

How about a National Drink Milk Week in June.

Or, a Ton of Topsoil Disappearance Day after a big thunderstorm in July.

Or, just the opposite, a National Rain Dance Day for Corn during tasseling.

Now, days or weeks like this, might get at the heart of some of the specific problems that are facing agriculture

No Ag Week or Day is needed to remind farmers that spring is near Like migrating birds or lost dogs, they have an instinctive personality trait that comes forth about this time of the year just like the first flowers and buds.

But let that rural rhymer and Bally balladeer, Sandy Moser, who makes periodic poetic contributions to Lancaster Farming express this condition she's been noticing in her father:

Some people say my Dad is sick and I am forced to agree, for as the days keep getting warmer his temperature goes up by degrees.

This affliction is a common thing for it happens every year.
It seizes the entire farming community and there is no cure, I fear.

The symptoms make it simple to diagnose this disease, it's important to catch it early,
after winter's last freeze

The sufferer sneaks out in the middle of the night in hopes that he will not be seen,
He's greasing machinery, it's easy to tell.
he never gets his fingernails clean

The smell of grease will be on his breath though this accusation he'll deny,
He'll say he feels quite normal,
but notice the glazed look in his eye

He will be prone to fits of violence -
a sure sign he's not well,
He'll jump up and kick the TV set
if the forecast is rain or another cold spell

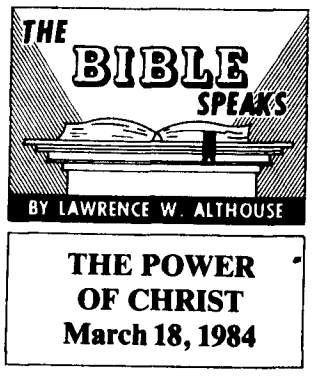
These symptoms remain until the patient is on his tractor, the gas pedal floored.
Plowing fields up to the horizon,
And only then will he be cured



THE POWER OF CHRIST
March 18, 1984

Background Scripture:
Mark 4:35 through 5:43.
Devotional Reading:
Mark 4:10-20.

Last week I was at a public presentation where a prominent theologian was asked about the miracles of Jesus. The theologian gave a long and rambling answer, but the essence of his reply was that he didn't believe they were literally true as presented in the New Testament.

Lots of people, lay and clergy alike, seem to find the miracles of Jesus a continuing source of either difficulty or embarrassment. In short, they would find it necessary to believe that the miracles, for example as recorded in Mark 4 and 5, did not really happen: Jesus did not still the storm (4:37-41), did not heal the woman with a "flow of blood" (5:25-34), and did not raise the daughter of Jairus from apparent death (5:35-43).

WHO IS THIS?

At the same time that I have experienced so much skepticism on the part of Christians, I find that there are many people with scientific backgrounds who seem much more open to the possibility that Jesus did the things the New Testament claims that he did.

Last year about this time I was privileged to have dinner with a Nobel laureate scientist, who told me in the course of the evening that none of Jesus's miracles appear to him to be beyond the realm of possibility. "In our day, no one should decide that anything is impossible," he told me.

Unfortunately, too much preoccupation with whether this or that act of Jesus is "possible" or "impossible" keeps us from going beyond the act itself to the deeper meaning to which it points. I have no problem believing that Jesus stilled the storm, but I am also aware that there is more involved than just a storm. The event is a demonstration of Jesus' power to still all the storms of life, human and natural.

Neither do I have any problem believing that Jesus healed the woman with the "issue of blood," for I have see such demonstrations of Christ's power to heal in my own life. (See the writer's book, Rediscovering The Gift Of Healing). But I know that these demonstrations of Christ's power are indicative of his power to heal all human hurts.

ALL MEN MARVELED

"Who then is this," asked the disciples, "that even wind and sea obey him?" (4:41). Later, when he had cast the demon out of the Gerasene Demoniac, it is said, "And all men marveled" (5:20).

Jesus was a preacher and teacher whose words have changed the world. But we must not forget that he was also a man of power—power demonstrated in marvelous acts that boggled people's minds Yet, even more than that, the "signs and wonders" pointed to an even greater power and authority. the capacity to heal all human brokeness and meet the deepest needs and hungers of the soul.

To Practice Safety Around Liquid Manure Pits

Many manure pits will be cleaned out at this time of year for field application. This by-product of the livestock and dairy business is very useful as fertilizer. However, the pit can be a safety hazard because of poisonous and explosive gases. When the mixture is agitated in order to be removed, these gases are more plentiful and much more dangerous. Good ventilation above the pit is very important. Also, anyone who goes down in the empty pit should be wearing a gas mask. These gases are dangerous and can be fatal to both humans and animals. We urge all farmers to caution their employees of this potential danger.

To Control Wild Garlic

We may like onions on our hamburgers and in other foods, but very few of us like onion-flavored milk. This can easily happen on dairy farms where wild garlic plants are allowed to grow. Many pastures are infested with wild garlic One of the best times to start control measures on this week is early in the spring when the young plants are 4 to 8 inches high. An application of 2, 4-D will knock them down. Follow the label for directions. When this is applied around the middle to latter part of March, little damage is done to any legume in the area. If garlic plants are allowed to mature each year, the pasture area will become so contaminated that dairy cows cannot utilize the grass.

To Care For Horses

Many horses and ponies are neglected this time of the year. When they're kept in a stable for long periods of time...such as during the winter...they can get out of condition. And they may develop some bad habits. But you can avoid this by following good management practices.

Your horses are natural athletes and need a daily workout to keep their muscles, feet and legs in good condition. Twenty or 25 minutes on the end of a long line is one of the best ways. Just let the horse run circles around you. This keeps him from getting fat and developing weak feet and legs.

Don't feed moldly, dusty or dirty hay or grain to horses; this could result in colis or respiratory problems. Free choice of clean water, salt and minerals should be

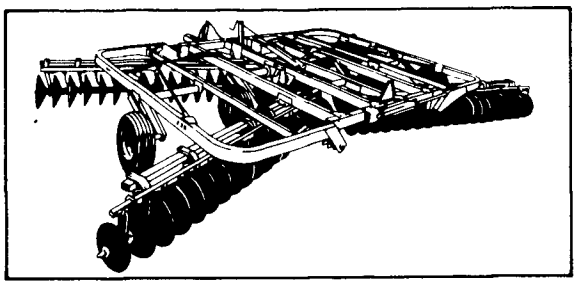
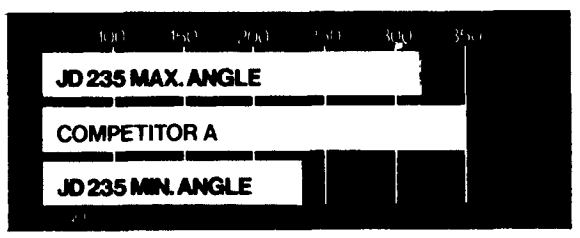
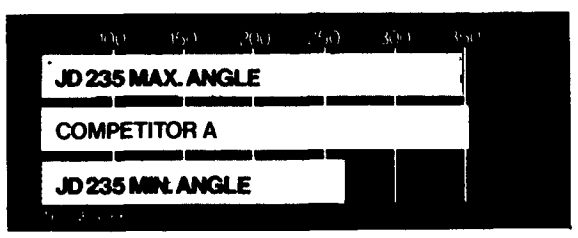
JOHN DEERE DISK DRAFT TESTS PROVE

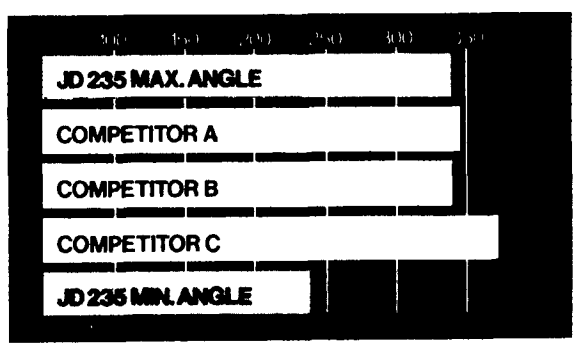
WE DON'T HAVE THE PULL YOU THINK WE DO

The chart below shows the results of disk draft tests John Deere engineers ran in Illinois, Tennessee and Kansas against our major full-line competitor. In the Kansas test we also took on two of the major short-line disks. These tests help dispel the rumor that our disks pull harder. Sophisticated computer equipment accurately measured the results of side-by-side runs. The drawbar pull required by our disk at maximum gang angle was less than, or equal to, that of the competition. At no time did we pull harder. When we went to minimum gang angle (the competition's fixed gang angle couldn't match this ideal adjustment for less-aggressive seedbed tillage work), we required far less pull. Stop by and let us give you all the details on these draft tests. And we can point out all the features that make John Deere Level-Action disks your best buy.









TODAY'S JOHN DEERE LEVEL-ACTION™ DISKS—1ST IN QUALITY

JOHN DEERE

SIMPLE LEVELING

Level disking is quick and easy . . . turning one crank is all it takes

Leave your wrenches in the tractor: drawn Level-Action™ disks have a simple crank adjustment.

Eliminate a center ridge or valley by rotating this crank. It's the only adjustment needed in most fields.

These disks also put virtually 100 percent of their working weight on the blades, thanks to the Level-Action hitch linkage. See us for details on John Deere disks in widths and weights that match your needs.

provided. Good care now will help bring good performance during the rest of the year.

To Control Mice In Orchards

Now that the winter weather is almost gone, our fruit growers should take a look at the newly exposed grass sod in their orchards. If there are runways at the surface of the grass, it is a good sign that there are plenty of mice in the orchard, even though a mouse baiting program may have been followed last fall.

The mice have used up their stock piles of stored food and are now looking for a fresh supply. At this time of the year they will move quickly onto bark and roots of fruit trees.

Fruit growers should re-bait their orchards as soon as possible if there are fresh mouse signs.

For growers who put out bait stations in the orchard last fall, it will be a simple matter of replenishing the rodenticide-treated bait under all of the stations. You must remember that the mice are hungry and can do a lot of damage to fruit trees between now and the time that other plants start to grow in the spring.

NO-TILL GRAIN DRILL

For Heavy Stubble and Hard Soils

The new Lilliston 9680 No-Till Grain Drill will operate in maximum severe conditions, where uniform penetration of heavy stubble and hard soils is required. Unlike some of the so-called "no-till" drills available today, which are actually conventional drills with front coulters added, the Lilliston is designed, from the ground up, for one purpose: No-till seeding.

Some Special Features

- Maximum empty weight of 7,160 lbs transfers 390 lbs. of down pressure to each of the 18 openers on 7 inch spacings.
- Heavy duty 14 inch cutting coulters and double disc openers, spring-loaded scrapers and center rib gauge wheels.
- Three hydraulic cylinders regulate pressure on openers for precision depth control
- Patented double-chambered feed cups which maintain even seed flow to the feed wheels
- Cluster gear boxes for easy selection of 27 application speeds of seed and fertilizer

Eggs to be tested for antibodies

BY KIMBERLY HERR

LANCASTER — In the continuing effort to eradicate the deadly Avian influenza, eggs from some 300 flocks will be tested for influenza antibodies.

Tim Allwein, a spokesman for the Pa. Poultry Federation, stressed the testing will be done only one time. It will not involve continual testing. He explained that all of the testing will be done in egg processing plants in the quarantine area.

According to Allwein, the question now is to determine what action to take if the eggs test positive for the influenza.

Allwein said the USDA Scientific and Technical Advisory Council is recommending that the flocks with positive eggs be killed, which could result in the depopulation of two to three million birds. Some of these flocks, according to Allwein, may be those that have been repopulated. No definite decision has been made at this time.

In other developments, Allwein said "We do have word that they (the USDA) is working on a formula to adjust the indemnity rate upward."

Allwein said they had no details as to the rate, at this point, but said the payments will be retroactive, beginning probably from the time the Task Force arrived in Lancaster.

Also, Allwein announced there has been a change in the policy of payments for depopulated birds. Owners of the birds can now request payment immediately after the birds have been killed or wait until they are ready to repopulate their flock. Owners will receive full replacement value for their flock, but the amount will depend on market prices at the time payment is made.

Prior to this change in policy, Allwein said, owners were at the mercy of how long it took for everything to be processed before they got their money.

In other policy news, Allwein said, as of March 28, any unsanitized nest run eggs for table use can move only from flocks that are on the poultry watch and are determined to be free of Avian influenza. This also applies to any birds that will be moving within the quarantine zone.

In other news, Allwein announced that the quarantine in Maryland may be dropped by the end of March. The contaminated flock in that state is soon ready to be repopulated, he said.

Delmarva sets poultry fund goal

GEORGETOWN, Del. — Paul E. Ferrier, Salisburg, Md., fund drive general chairman and first vice president of Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI), announced during a recent fund drive kick-off meeting that the goal for the 1984 DPI campaign has been set at $295,000.

DPI is a non-profit trade association that represents all phases of the area's multi-million dollar poultry industry and related interests and works for the continued progress of the poultry industry on the Delmarva Peninsula. One of DPI's primary objectives during the past several months has been to coordinate efforts to prevent the spread of avian flu to Delmarva's concentrated broiler industry.

Donald W. Mabe, president and chief executive officer of Perdue Farms Incorporated, Salisbury, Md., was the featured speaker for the evening. Mabe, who served as president of DPI in 1973, praised the work of the organization in its numerous areas of activity. He also commented on the many hours of time and talent that are given freely by industry people toward the accomplishment of DPI's goals.

Nearly 200 volunteer workers from communities throughout Delmarva were in attendance and reported a total of cash and pledges collected to date of $189,203. These "investments" to DPI will be used for industry related research, educational programs, legislative activities and the promotion of chicken.

Ferrier, who is general manager of G & M Sales of Salisbury, thanked the workers for their accomplishments to date but noted that there is much hard work ahead in order to meet the $295,000 goal. The fund drive will conclude on March 28.

Other key fund drive chairmen are: Maryland - Richard Barr, Barr International, Salisbury; Delaware - Warren Mumford, Mumford Sheet Metal Works, Selbyville; Virginia - Pete Patrick, Kellam Propane, Pocomoke City, Md.; off-Shore Investments - Sonja Massey, Perdue Farms, Salisbury; Grow-out Companies - Otto Lange, Chesapeake Foods, Inc., Berlin, Md.; Grow-out Company Employees - Roy Beauchamp, Mountaire Farms, Inc., Princess Anne, Md.; Salisbury - Bob Conaway, G & M Sales of Delmarva, Salisbury.

Many ag revolutions on horizon

UNIVERSITY PARK — An exciting decade is ahead for U.S. agricultural research, in the opinion of Samuel H. Smith, Dean of the College of Agriculture at Penn State.

"Many of the great agricultural revolutions are still ahead of us," Smith affirmed in a recent interview. "We are still using only one percent of the world's 350,000 species of plants and depend on less than 20 of them for our major food and fiber crops," he added.

"Breakthroughs" are coming, he predicted, in biological nitrogen fixation to reduce use of fertilizers. In time, farmers will benefit from enhanced photosynthesis to improve plant efficiency and crop yields. And genetic research is in progress, he said, to produce rapid development of plants and animals that can withstand diseases and pests.

He maintained that new research is the key to the future for farmers. Although farm income is affected by temporary surpluses of grain and dairy products, no one doubts that world food demands will increase in the years ahead, he pointed out.

He termed agricultural research "an essential investment in the future strength and vitality of the nation's food and fiber production abilities."

Smith said the Agricutural Experiment Station at Penn State has scientists working in more than 300 active research projects. Over one-third of the "scientist years" in the Experiment Station, 36 percent, are devoted to seeking ways to produce an adequate supply of farm and forest products and to decrease production costs.

Twenty-two percent of the "scientist years" are devoted to protecting forests, crops, and livestock from insects, diseases, and other hazards.

Other research emphasis in the College of Agriculture includes management of natural resources, improving efficiency in marketing, developing new and improved products, and promoting community improvement in areas such as economic development, public services, recreation, and environment.

"We will maintain our emphasis on agricultural production and protection of crops, forests, and animals," the Dean of Agriculture affirmed. "However, any substantial growth of research in these areas will probably have to come from private funding rather than from taxes.

"I see a real potential for increased emphasis in research designed to improve marketing efficiency and to develop new and improved products" he affirmed.

Pa. Guernsey Breeders hold annual meeting

Ag Arena, the Farm Show Building or the Timonium, Md., fairgrounds for shows and sales.

Because the selling of the building has brought mixed emotions, the board of directors opened the meeting for discussion. With information it compiles and feedback it receives, the board hopes to make "the right decision" at its meeting in May.

Comments heard from members during the discussion included:

- "We've reached a place where we're spending too much time on the building issue. We should be doing more to promote the breed."
- "The original intent of the building, selling cows, is often in conflict with contracts made with others to bring money into the building."
- "If many of us had losing projects on our farms, we'd get rid of them."
- "We purchased the pavilion when we were fat. We're not that fat now and we're losing. on the average, $10,000 a year."

In addition to discussion on selling the building, Yost said another means of income would be to increase cattle sales. The association had $205,080 less in gross sales in 1983 than 1982.

Despite the bleak picture painted here, national director Janet Harding said that on a national basis, the breed is on the move. "We're going in the right direction," Mrs. Harding said.

The Guernsey breed is a leader in the fight against Johne's disease, Mrs. Harding said, and more research is underway for beta carotene. National sales are up and breed promotional efforts are increasing.

"I look for great progress in the near, next few years," she said.

Also on a positive note, assistant business manager Ruth Ann John said the state association has made strides in herd milk and fat production. In 1983, Pennsylvania had one herd over 15,000 pounds of milk, six over 14,000 pounds, 11 over 13,000 pounds, 17 over 12,000 and 15 over 11,000.

"Production-wise," Mrs. John said, "we're doing a real good job in the state."

Plaques were presented to the top four production herds during the association's annual banquet March 9. The high herd award went to Kenneth and Thelma Garber of Willow Street, who's 63 cows averaged 15,143 pounds of milk and 681 pounds of fat. The high herd fat award was won by Henry Verbeke of Reynoldsville. Verbeke's 17 Guernsey's produced 14,556 pounds of milk and 718 pounds of fat.

The high cow for milk was Cedar Fringed Nesta, owned by Francis and Ethel Kirk of Peach Bottom. Nesta produced 23,830 pounds of milk and 956 pounds of fat. High fat cow was Falcons Corporal Rita. Owned by Albert and Marian Hack of Berwick, Rita produced 19,223 pounds of milk and 982 pounds of fat.

All-American Guernsey honors went to: junior heifer, Keystone Big T Jade, owned by Roger and program. Through the slogan, 'We Need Milk, Come Grow With Us," supplemented with a videotape highlighting the cooperative's activities, Sumser said Lehigh plans to reach over 2,000 prospective members.

General manager William Stout said in his report that Lehigh is making progress in meeting milk needs. Also, the cooperative is paying more attention to milk quality, he said.

Stout briefed the 650 members attending the meeting on the milk producers security act which states that "the marketing of milk by producers requires prompt payment by handlers and processors."

The bill, Stout said, provides that cooperatives be deemed a producer and not a dealer; transactions would be filed with Pa. Milk Marketing Board; and a bond providing 75 percent coverage for 40 days would be necessary.

Lehigh Valley Farmers supports this bill, Stout said, stating, "We believe this is a good bill and should be supported by the House and Senate. We would like to see it effective June 1."

Lehigh president Alpheus Ruth remarked on another recent legislative bill, the milk diversion program.

"The low sign-up on the milk diversion program is upsetting," Ruth said. "I think the problem was a matter of timing - there was not enough time to inform the farmers, and farmers would be locked into a 10-month contract."

What happens if milk production is not reduced? "I expect the price support to lower to $11.50 per hundredweight," Ruth said, "and the 1985 Farm Bill won't be written by farmers."

These thoughts, shared by Ruth and Lehigh dairymen as well, lead to the meeting's theme, "Watch the Store in '84." Ruth said in a time of surplus problems, milk diversion programs, promotional concerns, world unrest and the presidential election, dairymen must watch the marketing aspects of their milk.

Running concurrently with the business meeting was a separate ladies' program. Guest speakers were Doris Thomas and Jan Allen, Lancaster County home economists, and Patti Hudson, a consultant to the extension service.

In a luncheon session following the meeting, honor plaques were presented to members achieving a standard plate count of 8,000 or less and those maintaining a somatic cell count of 300,000 or less. Members achieving the honor roll each month for 1983 were also recognized.

Guest speaker was Patrick Healy, chief executive director of the National Milk Producers Federation, Washington, D.C. Lackawanna County extension agent Thomas Jurchak was master of ceremonies.

Dairy farming helps change young lives

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

REHRERSBURG — It's called "the hill," God's Mountain, and includes over 300 acres of rolling countryside. Smiles are easily found here; cooperation, compassion and sharing are in abundance. Lives change. Former outcasts are transformed into good citizens and active Christians.

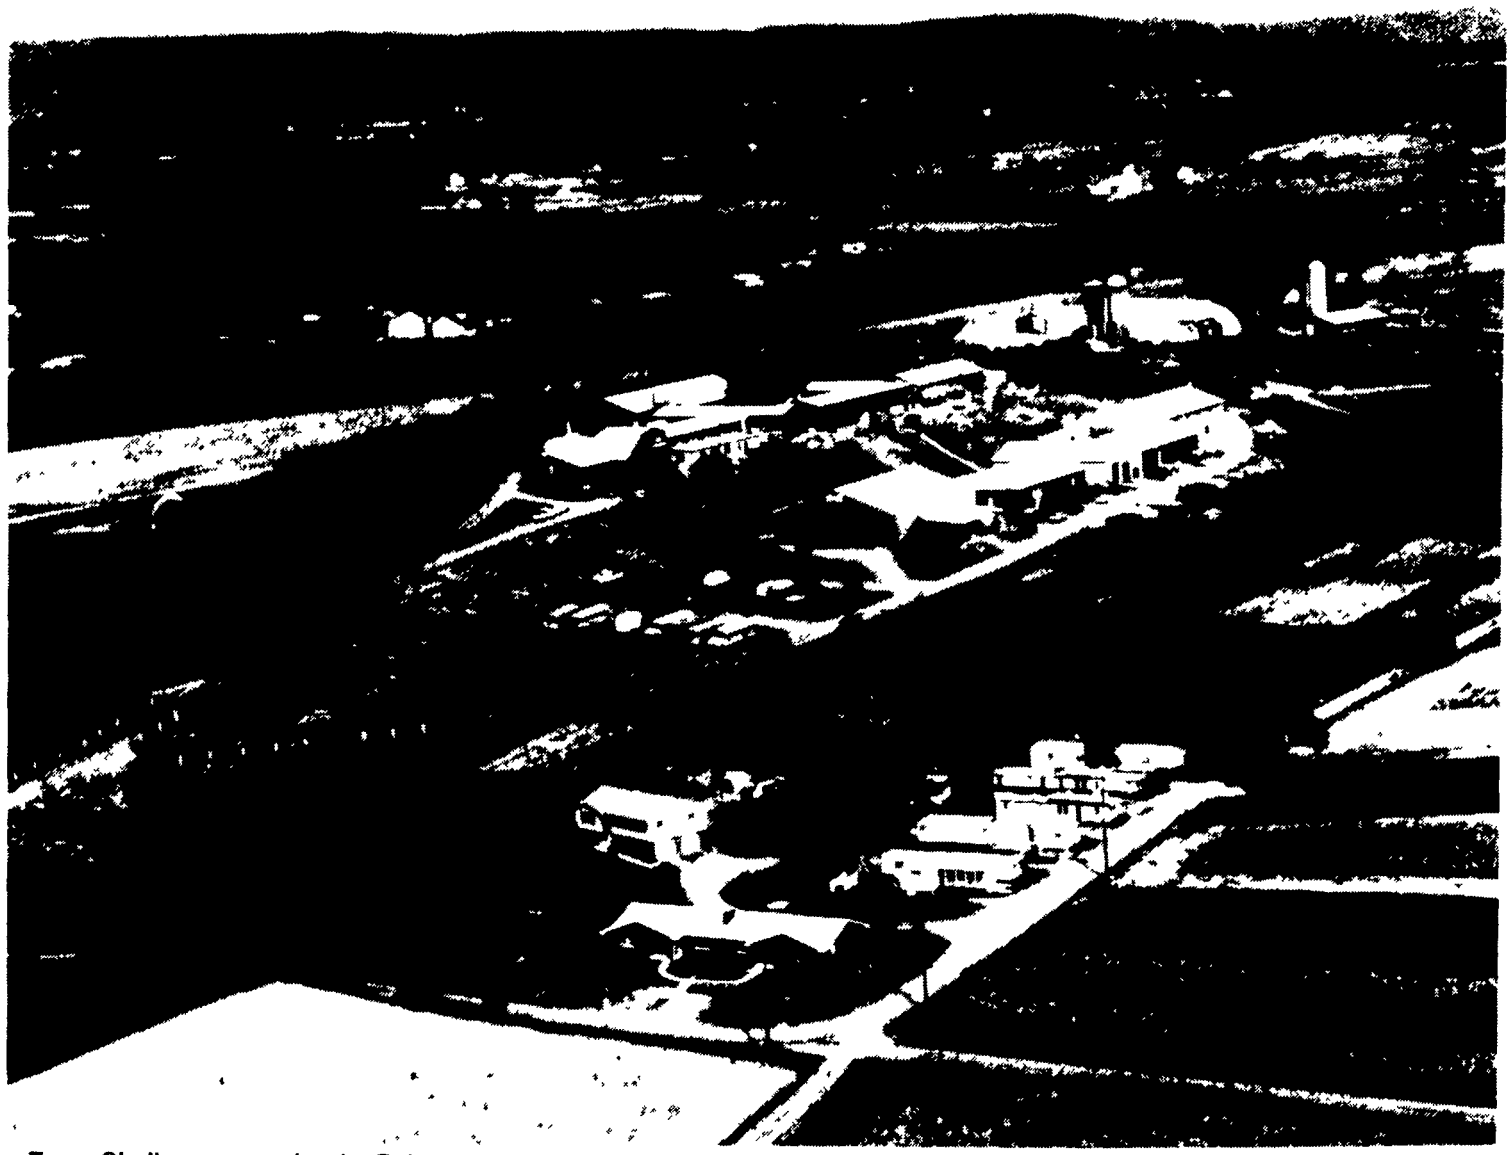
This haven is the Teen Challenge Farm and Training Center, located outside of Rehrersburg, Berks County.

The training center includes a print shop, ceramics shop, auto body shop, greenhouse, gymnasium, chapel, classrooms, and a dairy farm. The purpose of the center is to rehabilitate men with "life controlling problems," mainly alcohol and drug addiction.

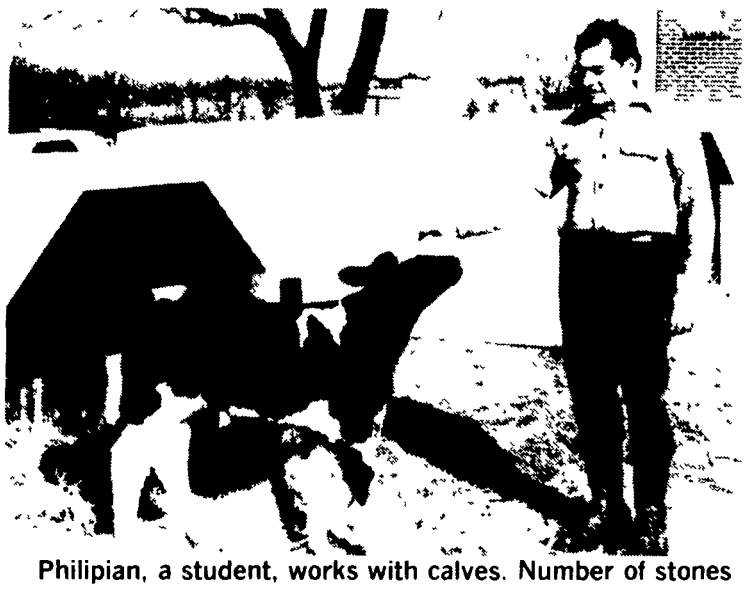
Students come from a wide variety of backgrounds and must go through an induction center where they have demonstrated their interest in improving themselves and in becoming a Christian. Once at the center, training emphasizes building Christian character, upgrading schooling, and learning one of the 21 vocational trades at the center to prepare them for a new life in society once again.

The teaching at the center stresses the application of Biblical principles to relationships in the family, church, chosen vocation and the community.

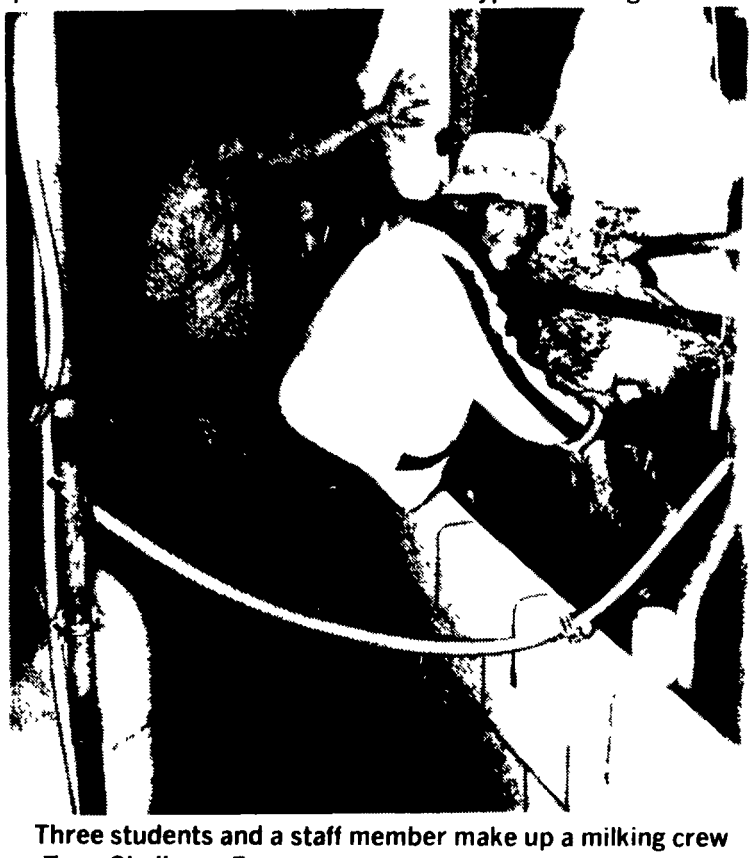
One of the best means of teaching these principles at the center is the dairy farm located within the complex. One hundred and fifteen Holstein cows are milked twice a day by students who volunteer to learn farming. Approximately 500 acres are tilled by students who learn that farmers work in all kinds of weather, even when they are sick. Replacement stock and bulls are raised by the students, in addition to some sheep.



Teen Challenge complex in Rehrersburg, Berks County, includes dairy farm in the background, other vocational-educational structures and staff housing in the foreground.



Philipian, a student, works with calves. Number of stones placed on hutches reminds students of type of feeding.



Three students and a staff member make up a milking crew on Teen Challenge Farm

The herd currently averages 15,762 pounds milk, 3.7% butterfat with 586 pounds butterfat. The herdsman predicts production will surpass 16,000 pounds in a month or two. The farm is able to support itself, the staff and still make contributions to the main complex on "the hill."

"It costs us to have students here," states Nelson Martin, farm manager. "But, we're not that interested in the money, but in changing lives."

"It's rewarding working with the students and seeing the changes," Martin states Martin has been with Teen Challenge for five years. A previous dairy farmer, he sold his operation to work at Teen Challenge.

"This is considered a ministry," says Lewis Sager, herdsman. "We deal with all kinds of mixed up backgrounds We aren't working for ourselves, we're working for the Lord," he states

Teen Challenge is a national network of rehabilitation centers for men and women It receives no government funding and relies on support from churches of all denominations, groups, and any individual who would like to help support its concepts. There are no tuition fees for students and anyone is welcomed.

The Rehrersburg center can accomodate 240 students. The average age of the students is 24. There is no upper age limit but the minimum age is 16 years. Martin explains that the older students have seen more alcohol related problems while the problems of the younger generations are more drug related. At the center, "there is absolutely no smoking or drinking permitted ever," Martin states.

Students are housed, four to a room. "They have to learn to deal with each other's personalities," Martin explains. In the first four months of the ten-month program, a student gets to switch from one vocation to another. At the end of

Acid rain study shows high concentrations

UNIVERSITY PARK — Acid content of rain, snow, sleet, and hail over Pennsylvania can be up to 42 times more acidic than "pure rain," according to James A. Lynch of the School of Forest Resources at Penn State.

Lynch and associates examined the acidity of rain and other forms of precipitation from a network of 12 statewide monitoring sites in 1982.

The most acid precipitation fell in the southwest portion of the state, including an area as far east as Centre County and north into Mercer County. In general, precipitation in the northeast quarter of Pennsylvania was less acidic than the rest of the state.

Acidity is expressed in pH units, Lynch explained. On a scale of zero to 14, any value below 7 is acid. "Pure rain" and other precipitation — uncontaminated by industries, autos, and power plants — has a pH of 5.6 to 5.7. Each drop of one pH unit, say from 6 to 5, represents a tenfold increase in acidity. A drop in pH from 6 to 4 means a hundredfold increase in acidity.

The annual average pH ranged from 3.98 in Armstrong County in the west, the most acid, to 4.17 in Pike County in the east. Cooperating on the project was Edward S. Corbett of the Northeastern Forest Experiment Station of the U.S. Forest Service, located at Penn State.

In general, the pH of precipitation in 1982 was more acid during the growing season than during the rest of the year. This is usually the case, Lynch said. The average pH of rain during the growing season varied from 3.92 to 4.08. The dormant season pH ranged from 4.06 to 4.40.

"Throughout the Northeast, adding manmade pollution to acid precipitation produces an average pH of 4.1 to 4.2," he commented. "This occurs when sulfur and nitrogen oxides from the burning of fossil fuels — industries, autos, and power plants react with natural precipitation to form sulfuric and nitric acid."

The 12 monitoring sites covered all major storm tracks passing over the Commonwealth. In this way, storms were sampled shortly after coming over the state as well as along one or more other points while moving from west to east.

Sulfate was the dominant compound in precipitation. Sulfate concentrations were highest in the center of the Commonwealth and decreased both east and west, with the decline most evident in the east.

Of the total annual sulfate in precipitation, 69 percent fell during the growing season. During the summer, solar radiation and humidity combine to speed the process that turns sulfur dioxide in the air into sulfate. Air circulation is also slow in the summer, leaving sulfates in the atmosphere for long periods of time.

"High concentrations of sulfate did not always occur in the area of greatest sulfur dioxide emissions," Lynch stated. "This strengthens our belief that pollutants can be carried long distances through the atmosphere."

Nitrate pollution on the whole was fairly uniform, with slightly more present in the west than in the east. Nitrate may be a significant [illegible]ilizer, it was observed, since most of it is deposited during the growing season

Calcium, potassium, and magnesium were found at very low concentrations. They "buffer" or neutralize acids in the atmosphere and are considered essential plant nutrients. Thus they are beneficial.

Measurable concentrations of chloride, ammonia, and sodium also occurred in precipitation during 1982. The highest concentrations of sodium and chloride were measured in the east due to the ocean's influence. Although slight, ammonia levels were highest in central Pennsylvania.

Md. names tobacco authority head

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Secretary of Agriculture Wayne A. Cawley, Jr., has announced the appointment of Stuart K. J. Carr, Jr., to the position of Executive Secretary, Maryland State Tobacco Authority.

Carr grew up on a tobacco farm in Southern Maryland and presently owns and operates his own tobacco and grain farm in Brandywine, Prince George's County. Between the time of his growing up and the establishment of himself in farming, however, Carr served for 20 years as a member of the United States Air Force. His primary Air Force duties related to explosive ordinance disposal which involved him as an active participant in the Viet Nam conflict. Upon his retirement in 1973 he returned to tobacco farming.

The major objective of the Executive Secretary is to ensure the orderly marketing of Maryland Type 32 tobacco. In pursuit of this objective he is responsible for setting sales quotas for warehouses, investigates alleged infractions of Maryland's tobacco rules and regulations and approves buyer schedules for various tobacco warehouses. He is also responsible for administering licensing procedures for warehousemen and buyers.

During the market season which this year runs from March 13 through April 26, he collects and records daily and weekly sales records from eight tobacco warehouses to ensure that established marketing procedures are accurately adhered to and that all tobacco marketing regulations are followed.

"We welcome Mr. Carr to the Department" said Secretary Cawley, "and are confident that he is capable of doing an outstanding job as Executive Secretary".

The award is presented to those dairymen achieving a herd average of 20,000 pounds of milk or 700 pounds of butterfat. Each winner received a desk lamp commemorating the second year for the President's Club honor roll.

In his report to the dairymen, Pennfield manager of feed marketing Ray Lehr stated that the company's goal in the dairy feed business is to "work with you and your feeding program." Lehr upheld his statement by listing accomplishments Pennfield achieved in 1983.

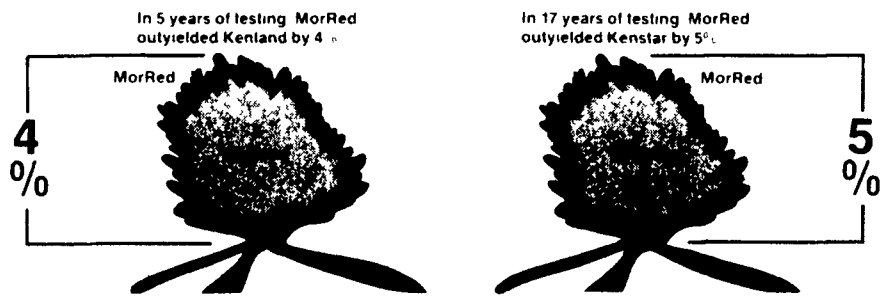
Combined resistance to both Northern and Southern Anthracnose

Northern and southern anthracnose can kill or greatly reduce the stand life of red clover

High resistance to powdery mildew

Contributes to early fade-out and reduces feed quality

Higher yield potential than Kenland or Kenstar



In 5 years of testing MorRed outyielded Kenland by 4 %

At $100 per ton for hay that s $18 00 per year per acre more for MorRed

Improved winterhardiness

The tougher a variety the better chance the crop has to produce throughout its expected rotation

Vigorous growth and quick recovery

The higher the disease resistance the better the chance for the crop to fully express its potential

Seeding versatility

MorRed Red Clover is ideal for No-till pasture and meadow seedings in old grass stands Alone for hay and pasture, MorRed can also be seeded in standing small grain or on an early prepared seed bed alone MorRed can be mixed seeded with grasses and small grains as part of a rotation or seeded in combination with other legumes—especially white clover along with grasses for hay and pasture. Farmers find that when used as part of a rotation, red clover is helpful in building the nitrogen level for the grain fraction of the rotation

Plant OLYMPIC.

Olympic Alfalfa's high resistance to disease and overall hardiness has made Olympic a preferred variety among growers seeking high alfalfa yields.

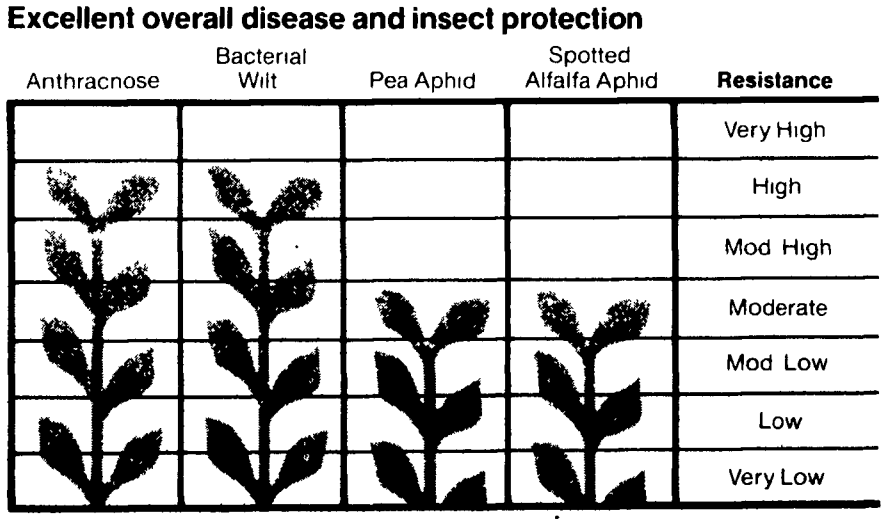
Proven high yields over a wide area

Olympic Alfalfa has produced over 10 tons/acre in several trials

High resistance to anthracnose

Anthracnose is a hidden blight in alfalfa that s a threat wherever warm humid conditions persist during the growing season It can reduce forage yields by as much as two tons per acre per year Olympic Alfalfa s resistance to this yield stealer is as good as any variety needs to be in any environment

Excellent overall disease and insect protection



Moderate winterhardiness

For it s primary area of adaptation, Olympic Alfalfa's winterhardiness is fully adequate

Fast growth; early maturity

Skarship Kinannie's unborn ET calf was second highest seller at the 'Angus On Parade' sale at Harrisburg.

Harrisburg hosts 'Angus on Parade'

BY JACK HUBLEY

HARRISBURG — Top selling animal at the Pennsylvania "Angus on Parade" sale held at the Farm Show Building March 9, was CLK Ida 383, a January 83 heifer owned by Krause Angus, Slatington.

A daughter of Pine Drive Big Sky, Ida was purchased by Walnut Lake Farm, of Wells, Minn., for $4,000.

An embryo transplant (ET) calf yet to be born, brought the second highest price of the day, of $3,400, paid by Twin Clay Angus of Kennett Square. The ET calf's donor is Skarship Kinannie, a daughter of Sayre Patriot, owned by Genetics Unlimited Inc., of West Grove.

Twin Clay's bid entitles it to the choice of the mating of Kinannie to either Premier Independence or Pine Drive Big Sky.

At $3,000, PS Key Play 308, owned by Penn State, took honors as the highest selling bull. Purchased by Nelson Farms, of Iowa, Key Play is a January 1983 son of PS Power Play.

With 38 consignors registered for this fourth "Angus on Parade" sale, bidding was active, resulting in gross receipts of $86,735 for an average of $1,156 for each of the 75 head sold

Other top selling animals included: an unborn ET calf from PS Northern Princess 285, owned by Penn State and purchased for $2,800 by Premier Beef of Howell, Mich.; Koolspring Connection 128, a bull owned by Koolspring Farm of Mercer, and purchased by Nancy Bushy of Gettysburg for $2400. Koolspring Connection is a son of the National Champion Rosebank Connection 69 — known as "10" — who reigned as Reserve Grand Champion Bull at the 1984 Farm Show.

The sale's high selling cow was GKF Idessa McHenry N261, consigned by Chester Hughes of Lancaster, and a daughter of Early Sunset Emulous. The cow was sold for $1,800 to John Higgins of Belle Mead, N.J.

A benefit semen auction preceding the sale grossed $2,860 to finance the activities of the Pa. Junior Angus Association. Donated by the Harrison Syndication of Fairfield, Calif., the high selling semen unit was purchased by Stivers Angus of Pittstown, N.J., for $450.

During the sale activities several breeders pledged over $3,000 to the second annual Pa. Angus Breeders Show, to be held July 14, at Center Hall.

Auctioneers for the sale were Mike Jones and Harry H. Bachman.

Allentown conference stresses farmland protection

ALLENTOWN — Township, county, and state officials gathered in Allentown last week to discuss protecting the state's farmlands at the Farmland Protection Conference. Co-sponsored by the Lehigh County Farmer's Association and the Lehigh County Extension Service, the conference introduced the concept of land evaluation and site assessment (LESA) to the planning officials.

Developed by Lloyd Wright, land use division, U.S. Soil conservation Service, Washington, D.C., LESA is a system designed to protect the best farmland in an area by evaluating its agricultural quality and viability. It helps land use decision makers put the protection of farmland as a priority in their zoning decisions.

LESA is based on a point system of 300 points with a maximum of 100 points assigned to land evaluation and 200 points assigned to site assessment. A higher point value designates farmland to be protected in the system. The system has the flexibility to accommodate differences among states and localities and eliminates any bias when making land use decisions.

In addressing the governmental officials, Wright stated that a system for land evaluation is used to carry out federal policy. The SCS offices handle the land evaluation and make the findings available to each locality.

Site assessment is left to the local level of government, either the county or township. "We found it (LESA) works better if you put more emphasis on site assessment," Wright stated. Site assessment deals with the percentage of agriculture within one and one-half miles of the site, the percentage of agriculture adjacent

Cooperatives offer support during tough times

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — Atlantic Breeders Cooperative President David Slusser told directors and members at the Cooperative's annual meeting Wednesday in Lancaster that "these times are truly challening. It is great to have the opportunity to be a leader in these times where you can do the most good."

In his report, Slusser looked at the industry from a human point of view and said, "We are people. We are a people industry. We've got what it takes to handle what needs to be handled. We've got the strength and the leadership as an industry. The youthfulness, the intelligence and the thoughtfulness of the crowds attending agricultural meetings is impressive."

Slusser said he feels some farmers will not make it through this rough period, but feels the loss will be less in the Northeast where dairymen are close to their market and where there are not as many alternatives to dairying.

He reminded the dairymen that cooperatives were born in the Depression and farmers relied on cooperatives during those troubled times. He said cooperatives offer the same support now. As for Atlantic, Slusser said, "We offer bulls at prices people can afford. Our member business has grown and will continue to grow."

General Manager David Yoder in his report said, "There will be fewer cows in the national dairy herd - that is a fact." Atlantic will face the challenge of more competition and lower prices for milk.

He, too, recognized the support of young dairymen, saying, "Never before have we had as many young, fine, good dairymen." He added, "A cooperative can only survive if it has the full support of those it serves."

President David Slusser, left, welcomes two new members to Atlantic's Board of Directors: Frank Yost, center, and Richard Rhoades.

Retired Penn State Extension Specialist Herbert Gilmore was honored with a plaque presented by Slusser on behalf of the Cooperative "for his tremendous contribution to the dairy industry." He was cited most specifically for his work with the state Dairy Herd Improvement Association, and for the growth of that organization which contributes significant information for the AI industry.

Gilmore headed the organization through the centralization of the milk processing and milk testing laboratory, and through the computerization of data processing.

During the business meeting Secretary Norman Sollenberger seated the five directors who were elected during the 35 district meetings held for members in February. Elected were: Paul Weaver, Royersford; Harold Bollinger, Newmanstown; Clyde Robison, Coal Center; H. Donald Allison, Clymer; Richard Rhoades, Emlenton. Seated also was Frank Yost, Newville, who was appointed to serve the one-year term remaining for Kenneth Zeigler who resigned.

At the re-organization meeting of the directors, the following officers were re-elected: David Slusser, president; James Kreider, vice-president; Norman Sollenberger, secretary; John Paxton, treasurer.

Participating in the annual meeting were 45 members who were elected by members to serve on the resource and promotion committee. These members serve a one-year term, offering imput to the Cooperative as well as serving as spokemen for Atlantic.

Penn State Agricultural Economist H. Louis Moore told the dairymen at the annual meeting that there is no quick fix to the current dairy surplus situation. In fact, he realistically said they must expect "alternating periods of feast or famine." He noted that other agricultural enterprises have these fluctuations, with periods of over-production and then periods of cutting back.

Moore said the dairy industry has been shielded from these cycles by support prices, but added that unless "we have some way of controlling what individual farmers do, the production problems are likely to continue. Agriculture is the closest to a competitive industry which exists in the United States today."

Optimistic about the economy, Moore called this year the "funny season," noting that during an election year those in power will continue to spend whatever it takes to stay in power, and they will not raise taxes.

He was not enthusiastic about the potential of the proposed promotional program to make a dent in the surplus. The $200 million to be spent will "stop very short of solving the dairy surplus problem," he said. Since every commodity is now advertising programs. Because stomachs only hold so much, Moore said, "We have to displace something else."

Despite the fact that participation in the reduction program is "disappointing," Moore said there will be some pluses. "Each time the support price for milk is cut milk becomes a better buy for the consumer. That's one of the big gains." Since there are two reductions in support price written into the law, consumers will benefit.

He added, "There is no quick way to match production and consumption." He said the bill was written to attach the problem of production because there was not enough time to tackle the problem of consumption.

What's next for dairy farmers? Moore predicts it will be pretty much business as usual until April 1, 1985 when the first $.50 reduction takes place. When the second reduction takes effect on July 1, 1985, the support price will be at about $11.60.

The good news Moore brought his audience is that total farm income will probably go up in 1984 to an estimated $29-$34 million from $23 million in 1983. In planning for 1984 Moore advised farmers not to wait to buy "price rising items." He cited fertilizer as one example of an item which farmers will need and could purchase now. This will also make it necessary to arrange for borrowing early.

He also advised, "Don't buy big ticket items for tax reasons only." That's false economy. He added, "Bigger is not always better."

Moore said that loans will be based on cash flow rather than assets, forcing good records and management by farmers. He also advised thinking of debt retirement, which is what many did with their 1983 PIK payments.

The PIK program was successful, Moore stated, but only in combination with the 1983 drought which helped cut production. Production of feed grain was cut in half, to reduce stores of grain from a six-month carry-over in 1983 to a six week carry-over in 1984.

Moore called 1984 the "continuing saga of the dairy non-program." He said Congress seems only able to deal with the surplus problem on a short term stop gap basis, blaming part of this on the fact that everything is done based on a two-year term with re-election looming large in how they act.

The pressure is on for interest rates to go up, which is one reason farmers shouldn't wait to buy things they need. Consumer incomes are up and they are borrowing more and spending more, which is good news not just for the general economy but for the agricultural economy as well. "They are buying products they couldn't afford before," Moore noted.

He called the federal deficit an "overriding problem, which really aren't attacking." After the election, he said something will have to be done.

this period, he must select the job that he wants to do when he returns to society.

Explaining that it depends on the season of the year as to whether farming is popular with the students, Sager says they usually work with 16 to 18 trainees a month.

"Can you imagine working with new people in your parlor every month?" Sager asks, smiling. Some new students also change their minds in a week or two, after first impressions of farm work don't hold true, Sager explains.

The cows are milked in a double six herringbone parlor. Students are always supervised and work in teams. "Everything must be 'cut and dried', written down," Sager explains. Cows are grouped in high and low groups and fed on a bunk in a freestall barn. Although the parlor includes an auger system for feeding, any feeding in the parlor is done in tubs. "We didn't want to feed fat cows," Sager states. "We cut our feed in the parlor in half by using tubs," he says. Nupulse milkers are used and cows are washed with an iodine wash. Hoses are not used because "you cannot teach students to dry them (the udders) properly," according to Sager.

Steve Reynolds is the director of education. His father was the first director at the center.

Calves are raised in hutches and fed with bottles the first week and switched to buckets after that. Because they are working with "city slickers", a unique system was developed to make sure that calves are fed properly. "We keep them on milk longer because they don't have an experienced hand feeding them," Martin explains. A piece of metal or wood is placed on top of the hutch to indicate when the calf gets fed. One stone on a hutch means one bottle. Two stones means "mother's milk."

"You don't dare say colostrum, they wouldn't know what you were saying," Sager states. Although the calves help to teach good work habits, calf mortality is kept at five to eight percent.

"It takes very close supervision," Martin says explains in referring to tractor and equipment operation.

"We pray a lot too," Sager adds.

Scott Fischer is employed as a general farm hand and takes care of equipment maintenance. Although maintenance costs run higher than most farms, there have never been any serious injuries.

Sager states that when a new student arrives on the farm, their chief impression is that farming is "driving tractor," a favorite with the students. To get rid of an excess of this first enthusiasm and also for safety reasons, students are not allowed to drive for the first three months.

"Farming doesn't fit everybody," Sager admits, but says, "it does have a good variety." He remembered one student, "after a month he was so in love with farming, you couldn't run him off it."

Martin continues: "We're interested in teaching them good work habits."

"The farm is not what we push on them, the work habits are though," Sager adds. They begin to appreciate the products more, the herdsman says.

"Now, they appreciate what it takes for that gallon of milk," Martin says. "The experience they get here will last a lifetime. We have installed in them what a farm is. Now, we have city friends that know what a farm is."

Anyone is welcomed to visit and tour Teen Challenge anytime.

"We're not fancy, but we try to do it right," Sager states of the farming operation. Periodic open houses and special programs are held throughout the year and the public is always welcomed. Calls and inquiries are invited. Write to Teen Challenge Training Center, Box 98, Rehrersburg, 19550, or call (717) 933-4181.

The center was founded in 1962 by David Wilkerson, New York City. In its short lifespan to date, Teen Challenge has achieved an 86% success rate in rehabilitating its students. With an independent survey, these statistics were revealed to be many, many times better than any other institution. Why?

"We attribute it to the Jesus factor" Sager explains.

Prayer is mandatory for the students. With its farm and entire classroom complex, Teen Challenge instills in its students a new decency and reverence for life.

Those at the center stress:

"our goal is that these former outcasts of society will become useful law-abiding citizens and contributing Christians helping others as once they were helped."

Herdsman Lewis Sager explains that all instructions must be written down for the variety of students.

Pa. Game Commission honors Goodwin

UNIVERSITY PARK — For his many years of conservation work and outstanding contributions to the wildlife cause, Kenneth Goodwin, Penn State head of poultry science, was awarded the Pennsylvania Game Commission's Senior Wildlife Conservation Award on March 6.

"It is only on rare occasions that we feel we are justified in presenting this award, and this is a special moment in the Game Commission's history," said Eugene Nelson, assistant chief of game management, Pennsylvania Game Commission, who presented the award.

"Dr. Goodwin has served in his present position for 17 years," Nelson said. "The Game Birds Industry was rather small and just beginning to expand when he guided and encouraged his three divisions, the Farm, Resident Research Department, and Poultry Extension, to cooperate and assist not only the Pennsyvlania Game Commission but the Commercial Game Bird Industry with our many and varied complex problems."

Among other services to the Commission, Goodwin made available the help of the farm staff to hatch all of the wild turkey eggs for one season when the commission's incubators failed to function.

Goodwin, who plans to retire in June, has been head of the Poultry Science Department since 1966. Under his direction, the department has provided programs in resident education, research and Extension that are designed to meet the needs of a rapidly changing agricultural technology.

A native of Ossining, N.Y., he earned a bachelor of science degree in agriculture, master of science degree in animal genetics and histology and a PhD in animal genetics from Cornell University.

Before coming to Penn State, he was a geneticist at Kimber Farms Inc. in Fremont, Cal. and at Heisdof and Nelson Farms in Redmond, Wash. In 1975, he was a Food and Agriculture Organization consultant in Bangalone, India.

Goodwin has served as Director of the Poultry Science Association, associate editor of the Poultry Science journal, a member of the Industry Relations Board and a member of the Board of Directors of the World's Poultry Science Association.

He is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a member of the American Genetic Association, the Genetics Society of America, the American Institute of Biological Science, Sigma Xi, honorary research society, Gamma Sigma Delta, honorary agricultural fraternity and Epsilon Sigma Phi, honorary Extension fraternity.

Eugene Nelson, right, assistant chief of game management, The Pennsylvania Game Commission, presents the commission's Senior Wildlife Conservation Award to Kenneth Goodwin, Penn State Head of Poultry Science. The award is given only on rare occasions. Dr. Goodwin received the award for his many years of conservation work and outstanding contributions to the wildlife cause.

Beef field day slated

MT. AIRY, Md. — Carroll County, Md. beef cattle producers will have an opportunity on Saturday, March 24, to see demonstrated the proper use of good cattle handling facilities at the Beef Cattle Handling Field Day at Dr. Emmett Full's Back Acres Angus farm, 3950 Twin Arch Road, Mt. Airy, Md.

The Field Day held in cooperation with Dr. Full and the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service is open to anyone interested in learning more about cattle handling equipment and seeing demonstrations on cattle identification techniques, implanting with various growth stimulants, and castration using the new non-surgical chemical method. This will be the first time Maryland cattlemen will have the opportunity to see this new castration method demonstrated.

Other topics on the day-long program includes a talk on heifer selection and evaluation using performance records and visual appraisal of animals in Dr. Full's herd. Many livestock equipment and health supply companies will have displays set up at the Field Day.

A roast beef luncheon will be served at noon. Pre-registration of $2.00 per person (children under 12 free) is encouraged and should be mailed to J. William Clark, Extension Agent, Agricultural Science, 9811 Van Buren Lane, Cockeysville, Md. 21030. Registration at the Field Day will be $3.00 per person.

Agronomist honored in Md.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Dale Morris, Agronomist with the Maryland Department of Agriculture, Turf and Seed Section, was recently honored "For his outstanding contributions to the seed industry and Maryland agriculture" by the Maryland Crop Improvement Association.

In his congratulatory remarks, Secretary of Agriculture Wayne A. Cawley, Jr., said "This is another example of a job well done by a member of this Department. You are a credit to the Turf and Seed Program".

Cawley also expressed a feeling of extreme satisfaction that members of the State's agricultural industry do take notice of the excellent work being done by his Department and are thoughtful enough to publicly acknowledge the efforts of its individual members.

Morris was born in York, Pa., raised in the Beltsville area of Prince George's County and graduated from High Point Senior High School. In 1976 he received a Bachelor of Science degree with a major in Agronomy from the University of Maryland where he was a member of the Phi Eta Sigma honor society. Prior to joining the Maryland Department of Agriculture staff in 1978, Dale was employed with Giant Food, Inc., and as a federal grain grader.

As the Turf and Seed Section Agronomist responsible for the seed certification work in Maryland, Dale has shown a dedication to his assignment that has resulted in a steady increase in the certified acreage grown in Maryland while maintaining high standards of quality. He willingly and enthusiastically devotes long hours when necessary to get the job done.

Dale, his wife Veralynn, and their young son Christopher, make their home in the Laurel area of Howard County.

March loan rate set

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Commodity and farm storage loans disbursed in March by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Commodity Credit Corporation will carry a 9-7/8 percent interest rate, according to CCC Executive Vice President Everett Rank.

The new rate, down from 10 percent, reflects the interest rate charged CCC by the U.S. Treasury in March, Rank said.

"120 is for the man who can make alfalfa pay."

I'm a DEKALB-PFIZER dealer and a dairyman. Economics plays a big part in my operation. That's why choosing the right alfalfa is such a big decision.

My alfalfa is DEKALB Brand 120. DEKALB-PFIZER said it was a top performer and they're right. It gives my cows a fine stemmed, leafy hay and more tons per acre.

You can count on 120 for winter hardiness—even after a season of tough weather. This seeding will last me for a few more years.

120 is topping state yield trials all across the country. With that kind of record, and my own experience, I'm proud to recommend it to my customers. Sure, I put more money into 120, but I get it back, cutting after cutting. So will you

Who's making your alfalfa investment pay?

I am.

utilizing nutrients and what effect high rates are having on them.

Soil testing will also go much deeper this year. With an hydraulic probe on a tractor, samples will be taken to depths up to four feet where possible.

In addition to providing access to test locations, cooperating farmers help by giving researchers their past histories of manuring, fertilizing and cropping operations and keep daily temperature and rainfall data.

In addition to the scattered soil testing locations, specific studies will concentreate on both particular cropping and livestock operations.

Five specific corn plots will be studied closely to examine varying amounts of nitrogen being applied. Also, one dairy and one poultry operation will be closely studied to trace the flow of all nutrients into and out of the farm. Everything going into and out of the farms will be weighed and measured to keep exact tabs of the nutrient flow.

From last year's study of 44 field locations on 22 farms, the studies have already revealed data on the amounts of manure and fertilizers being applied.

Findings of amounts have ranged up to 600 to 700 lbs. of manure nitrogen and 900 lbs. of manure phosphorus being applied on some farms.

"Now, we're already able to tell you when you have too much on at the beginning of the year," Baker explained.

The continuing studies are aimed at pinpointing the amount of additional nutrients that become available during the growing season from the weathering of the manure and how much excess nutrients are remaining in the soil after harvest and what is carried over the following spring. And, of course, what happens to nutrients between these two periods.

Baker explained that area farmers will see more and more people studying operations as projects expand.

"We're working toward a goal of helping farmers to achieve better nutrient and soil fertility management," Baker said.

"We still want maximum crop yields, but with minimum loss of nutrients."

He also had some words of caution of why achieving a better soil nutrient balance is so important.

He cited the possibilities of subsidized programs to help farmers market their manure.

Also, the possibility that extreme livestock and poultry concentrations will be required to properly handle their own manure accumulations.

And, the ultimate possibility which current efforts are trying to prevent because it would seriously affect future farming operations – that of limiting livestock numbers per acre.

Forestry group to form

DOVER, Del. — A new organization is being formed in Delaware by state residents concerned about the future of forestland.

The Delaware Forestry Association will hold its first meeting Wednesday, at the Colony Inn in Harrington beginning at 6 p.m.

Although prospective members should have an interest in forestland in Delaware, they need not be a forestland owner. "We're hoping our membership will be made up of a cross section of people," said Robert Tjaden, one of the groups organizers. "We want forestland owners, professional people, and anyone who has a sincere interest or concern for our state's forests."

Any interested person is eligible for membership. For details on the organization or for dinner reservations, contact Robert Tunnell at 945-9300 or Robert Tjaden at 736-4811 or 800-282-8685.

Celebrate National Ag Day, March 20

Come sun, sleet or snow, March 20 will mark the first day of Spring, the arrival of a new planting season and the 11th annual observance of National Agriculture Day.

Ag Day, falling midpoint in Agriculture Week (March 16-22), is set aside each year to recognize the producers of the nation's food and fiber and to serve as a forum of education about the country's largest industry. The Agriculture Council of America Education Foundation in Washington, D.C., is national coordinator of Ag Day activities.

As in numerous farming communities across the country, York County's agriculture producers will salute an "Ag Day baby."

The first baby born on March 20 at York or Memorial Hospital will receive a gift package including a variety of locally-produced farm commodities, presented by county extension agent Tony Dobrosky.

York County Agri-Women is coordinating the Ag Baby commodity presentation of meat, dairy, fruit, vegetable and poultry products.

In a "Chief Executive Officer - Farmer" swap, a local business leader and farm producer will trade places for a first-hand look at the other's line of work.

Bill Groft, York Bank and Trust, will trade his desk and office on Ag Day for several hours with New Park orchard and grain producer Paul McPherson. On the following day, McPherson plans to don suit and tie for an in-depth look at the local banking industry.

In addition, on the national level, Mrs. John Block, wife of Secretary of Agriculture John Block, will host a midmorning news conference and reception for the new "Miss Agriculture" at the Department of Agriculture. Watch for the announcement of the winner this weekend on television. Irene Williams, Pa. Lamb and Wool Queen, and Tammy Zimmerman, Pennsylvania Potato Queen, were named two of the 10 finalists.

Also on Ag Day, Secretary Block will attend and speak at a National Press Club luncheon, beginning with a reception at noon.

The evening of the 20th, members of Congress and the Cabinet, along with state and national agricultural organization leaders, will attend a "Taste of the Country" barbeque/reception on the patio at the USDA Administration Building, featuring both Texas and North Carolina-style barbeque and an array of other foods to be enjoyed while the "Bluegrass Bureaucrats" band entertains.

Some of the accomplishments being celebrated Ag Day are as follows:

Agriculture production provides a firm foundation for the U.S. economy, accounting for about 20 percent of the nation's gross national product and more than 22 percent of its jobs, according to studies made by the Agriculture Council of America Education Foundation.

Sales of agriculture products, including food, clothing, tobacco, shoes, cut flowers, seeds and potted plants, generates more than $156 billion in production agriculture and $765 billion in the off-farm economy.

The Best silage program on the market today!

No other silage treatment is backed by more documentation of performance.

Treating your fresh-cut forage with SILO GUARD II results in a higher quality feed . . . which represents more milk production or weight gain from each ton of silage stored and fed.

The Best by Test and Performance.

- Silo Guard II reduced ensiling temperature degree days by 88%.
- Silo Guard II increased beneficial acid production by 4%.
- Silo Guard II improved protein utilization of the silage by 12%.
- Silo Guard II improved "Bunk life" of the silage by 21%.
- Silo Guard II treated silage produced 15.6 more pounds beef gain per ton of silage fed.

Northwest Breeders honor youth

BY BARB RADER
Staff Correspondent

COCHRANTON — Nancy Jo Mitrich and Kevin Field were honored as the 1983 Outstanding Girl and Boy at the Northwest Penna. Ayrshire Breeders annual spring meeting last Saturday.

The youths were awarded $50 savings bonds from the local club. Presenting the awards was Debbie Lyons, youth program director of the club. She noted that the two youths had devoted a lot of time and effort in putting their scrapbooks together, and each had won on the state competition level.

Lyons noted this was the first year for the awards, which will be continued next year. Any youth who is a junior Ayrshire member and resides in any of the following counties, Butler, Crawford, Erie, Mercer, Lawrence, Beaver, Warren, Venango or McKean, may compete in the contest. Applications may be obtained by contacting Debbie Lyons, Sugar Lake Road, Cochranton, Pa. 16314 or phone 814-425-3656.

The youths will be honored at the state meeting this weekend as the Penna. Outstanding Boy and Girl.

Vice President Barbara Rader conducted the business meeting in absence of the president. The local club will be selling fund-raising chances on $100 and $50 to be drawn on Sept. 8 at the Northwest District 4-H Show.

The club will be awarding two leather show halters for the grand champion and junior champion at the district 4-H show, along with a token to be given to each exhibitor at the show.

During Crawford County Fair, the club will sponsor one of the plaques to be given to the premier exhibitor and breeder. This was started a year ago and proven to be quite successful with the color breeds.

Reminders of up-coming sales and dates were given. Consignments were also noted as needed for the Penna. Spring Calf and Heifer Sale on April 21 at Bedford and for the All-Breed Calf Sale April 28 at Meadville. Breeders are to keep in mind the state sale date on Sept. 25 at the Farm Show Complex during All-American Week.

Several members of the club are also planning to attend the National Ayrshire Convention and Sale in Columbus, Oh. April 3-6. Junior members have been encouraged to attend for the first Junior Dairy Bowl Quiz to be held as part of the youth program. It was also noted their will be some northwestern Ayrshires going through the sale ring April 6.

Club members will also be serving on various committees for the 1986 National Ayrshire Convention. Ideas and suggestions should be kept in mind for this event.

July 8 was selected for the annual picnic and hosts will be Harold and Barbara Rader and family of Connoquenessing (Butler County). A picnic basket and anyone interested in Ayrshires is invited to attend the outing.

Northwest Pennsylvania Ayrshire Outstanding Boy and Girl award winners, Kevin Field and Nancy Jo Mitrich, receive their $50.00 savings bonds from Debbie Lyons, youth program director.

Only Bladex gives you all these advantages in heavy crop residue.

Bladex gives excellent control of surface germinating grasses in heavy crop residue. It stops grasses like fall panicum and foxtails which can germinate in the surface trash and escape from grass herbicides that work through shoot uptake. And because of its root uptake action, Bladex provides more effective residual control of both grasses and broadleaves.

2.

Bladex alone controls 55 weeds—14 grasses and 41 broadleaves—more than any other corn herbicide. The list includes die-hard foxtails, fall panicum, crabgrass, annual morningglory, smartweed, velvetleaf and nightshade.

3.

Bladex with atrazine is the most economical atrazine tank mix you can use. Added savings result because Bladex can end the need for expensive contact herbicides.

4.

Bladex is the only post-emergence corn herbicide labeled for controlling fall panicum after it has emerged.

5.

Bladex delivers excellent burndown of emerged weeds, up to three inches tall, in heavy crop residue. This can be an important advantage on fields which have no spring tillage.

6.

Using Bladex for burndown weed control on no-till acres can end the need for paraquat or other costly contact herbicides. Even hotter burndown is achieved when Bladex is applied with 2-4D and/or liquid fertilizer containing nitrogen.

This year, more than ever, get all the high performance weed control you can muster with Bladex at new federally approved rates. Ask for Bladex 4L or 80W. Always use as directed.

Digester proposals

$35,000, have been made available by the U.S. Department of Energy.

The primary objective of the studies is to determine if it is practical for several adjacent farms to ban together and pool manure in a cooperative anerobic digester system to generate power for sale-back to a utility.

Existing digester systems in the state are all found on large farms. The energy co-op proposal is designed for several smaller farmers whose individual herds would not justify a separate system.

While the Governor's Energy Council is primarily interested in the digesters from an energy-generating standpoint, such energy co-ops have a relationship to growing efforts to prevent agricultural nutrient pollution of wells and water in area streams that flows into the Chesapeake Bay.

One of the manure handling alternatives to complete field spreading that is being discussed is the marketing of the byproduct from a methane digester system. It has been mentioned that funds becoming available from the Environmental Protection Agency might help subsidize manure byproduct marketing efforts to make them economically feasible in areas of high livestock concentrations.

Farmland protection

to the site, and the percentage of agriculture on the propsed site.

"You need to deal with compatibility," Wright said. "Look for other alternatives," he added, meaning other land to put into development instead of prime farmlands."

"We're about 20 to 30 years too late," commented a participant in the conference.

"There's still some value in preserving what's left," Wright replied.

"I'm still convinced that much of western Pennsylvania and western New York have the opportunity to protect the farmland that's left."

Kenneth Friedman, executive director of the Lehigh Valley Conservancy and coordinator of this program commented, "a sense of cooperation between the township and the county seems to be in order."

Most participants were concerned with the complicated urban tangles becoming increasingly prevalent on the outskirts of larger cities. Prime farmland along with the agricultural smells and sounds are mixed with giant industrial developments and suburban housing. Problems arise because of no pre-planning. With LESA or a suitable land evaluation system custom tailored for a locality, industrial growth, sewage capability, transportation, and urban continuity is confined to where it can be the most feasible and pleasing to the community. Prime farmland would be saved from "haphazard developement."

"What makes LESA better than any one system is its combining about ten systems to eliminate bias," stated Thomas Klucick, district conservationist, Lehigh County. Klucick explained the Lehigh County land evaluation process and how Lehigh Valley utilized several points from LESA. Saying that LESA "trims down" the complicated mess of soil types and maps, Klucick stated that once a system is designed in a community, "use it as a tool." "To date, zoning has not been defensible," he said. According to Klucick, the LESA system is an unbiased system to fall back on. Nobody can point a finger at any partiality in planning.

"If we could get the urbans and the ags together," a state official exclaimed, the "helter-skelter developments" could be prevented.

"It's everybody's problem. We must come up with something that's compatible to all of us," said Frederic Brock, associate director, Lehigh-Northampton Counties Joint Planning Commission. Brock stated that ag preservation can be planned nationwide but it still remains to be a private decision with each land owner.

According to Lehigh County publications concerning farmland preservation, "greater emphasis should be placed on restoration or modernization of existing homes and industries using existing services, rather than creating new homes and industries requiring all new services." "Since 1974, almost 3,000 acres of farmland in Lehigh and Northampton Counties has been lost each year. We believe that land which is zoned 'agricultural' should be used only for the production of food and not as a 'miscellaneous' category where practically anything is permitted. Various possibilities of preserving farmland include outright pruchase, tax breaks, purchase of development rights, and creation of agricultural districts."

"Of what benefit is growth and progress if our open spaces, our farmland and our food supplies are destroyed and our cities deteriorate?"

At the conclusion of the presentations of the land evaluation systems, group workshops were conducted with each of the participants. Maps of different localities and soils were evaluated.

Microbes in Agriculture —

Weighing the Differences Between Silage Additives and Inoculants

The quality of silage you feed your livestock is affected by several critical factors. First, the silage that is fed out can't be any better than the crop that was put into the silo. If that crop is harvested at less than peak nutrient value or damaged by weather, the nutrient value of the silage will naturally be lower.

Silage management practices also have a major impact on quality. Using the proper length of cut, packing the silage well and protecting it effectively from exposure to air are all important in preventing loss of nutrients and dry matter.

Another factor critical to the production of high quality silage is the presence of certain types of bacteria which preserve the ensiled crop through the process of fermentation. Studies have shown, however, that nature does not always provide these bacteria in numbers great enough to ensure a rapid, efficient fermentation. So even if you harvest your crop at peak nutrient value and use the best silage management practices, you can't be sure of getting the highest quality silage consistently, year after year.

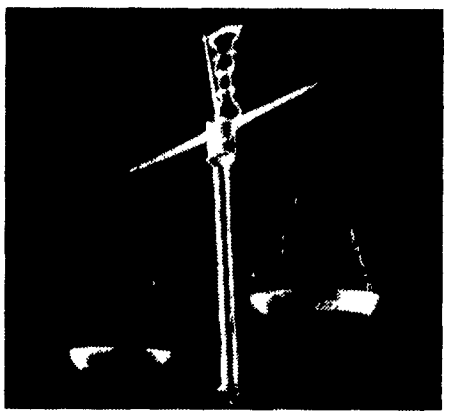
Several methods have been developed to make up for this shortfall in nature. One is the use of silage additives. Another is inoculation of silage with bacteria to promote fermentation.

A Mixed Bag of Additives

There are three major categories of silage additives in use today: acids, nutrients and enzymes.

Since the material in a silo is preserved by acids produced during fermentation, it would seem logical to improve preservation by adding acid directly rather than relying on the natural process.

The problem is, in order to ensure preservation, you would have to add at least 10 pounds of acid per ton of silage, which can be a very expensive proposition. The usual recommended rate of application for acids is too small to have a significant impact on preservation. Also, acids can be dangerous to handle and corrosive to equipment.



When it comes to selecting the most effective product for improving silage quality, a producer has many choices to weigh.

The addition of nutrients such as molasses, whey, urea or ammonia can obviously increase the feed value of silage. But, whether these additives actually aid in fermentation and preservation of the ensiled material itself is less certain. In theory, nutrient additives such as molasses will provide additional carbohydrate "fuel" for fermentation. However, as with acid, it takes several pounds of additive per ton to promote such an effect. In view of their cost, nutrient additives should be considered more for the feed value they may add to silage than as aids to fermentation.

Another silage additive category is enzymes. Enzymes are non-living substances produced by living organisms during such processes as digestion. They can be compared to the tools a workman needs to do a job. Just as these tools cannot do the work by themselves, so enzymes added to silage cannot produce acids without live bacteria being present. And enzymes cannot reproduce and spread through the silage as bacteria do.

Inoculation: An Active Approach

None of the silage additives just described increase in volume after being added to the silage. However, assuming the bacteria in a silage inoculant are alive and capable of reproducing, they will multiply quickly and spread through the silage, producing a rapid, efficient fermentation which preserves the ensiled material with a minimum loss of dry matter and nutrients.

It is very important that the bacteria in a silage inoculant be of the right type. For example, bacteria which can produce an efficient fermentation in milk do not have the same effect in silage. Ideally, the bacteria in a silage inoculant are not only alive and capable of reproducing, but are also specially selected from those strains best adapted for silage fermentation.

These two criteria have been applied to the development of new Pioneer® brand 1177 silage inoculant. 1177 is a product of the same kind of intensive genetic research and quality control which have made Pioneer a leader in hybrid seeds.

Used in combination with good crop and silage management practices, 1177 can help you overcome the shortfalls in nature which may have prevented you from getting the best silage possible.

1177 silage inoculant is available from your Pioneer sales representative. Ask him for more information about it.

For Mervin Peifer 4-H Has Been a Lifelong Career

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

Lancaster County is joining Pennsylvania in celebrating 4-H Week from March 18-25, recognizing the largest volunteer organization in the world. The greatest strength of the program is its volunteer leaders and the dedication they show year after year.

Mervin Peifer, R1, Manheim, completed his 29th year as a 4-H leader, and, like many leaders, he began his 4-H career as a 4-H'er himself. When some neighbors called upon him to help with the Lititz-Manheim Club as a leader he agreed, and his work as a 4-H leader began. He first helped with corn and tobacco projects but has now become a very skilled leader of the capon project. He presently serves as a leader with the Elm-Penryn Club.

Mervin recalls, "Community clubs used to consist of mainly agricultural things, but now they have everything under the sun. They are more diversified than they had been."

The wide diversity is fine with Mervin as he explains, "If you have enough leaders to take care of it, there is nothing wrong with it. It is not just agriculture anymore; it is also surburban and city." At this point Merv's wife Emma Ruth chimes in, "That's why I was never a 4-H'er." She laughingly points out that she grew up in the "city" of Manheim so being a 4-H'er was never a consideration for her.

Being a 4-H leader is seldom an isolated role, and in this case Emma Ruth is very supportive. "I help out when needed. I do enjoy helping," she says. The three Peifer children, Linda Esbenshade, Susan Hess and Mike, were all all 4-H'ers and from having children in the club, Merv knows the importance of parental involvement.

"If a kid doesn't have parental aid he has to struggle. If his parent is behind him it makes all the difference in the world," Merv says. The amount of support from parents hasn't changed much over the years. As Mervin puts it, "A certain portion of them give you support."

What does 4-H offer the young person? "It is the experience they get - the training, the responsibility," Merv replies. "There is a lot of experience that is 'free.' There is a lot to be learned and if you have a good instructor you can go a long way."

Both Peifers cited the 4-H exchanges, the opportunity to travel to Penn State and other opportunities as good reasons to remain active in 4-H.

A big change over the years has been the increased responsibility of the leader in the projects. Merv says, "County agents used to do all the scoring. Now leaders do that. Leaders play a bigger role in 4-H now than they used to."

Mervin recalls when his girls had capon as 4-H projects and they had 50 capons on their farm. "I remember wondering what we would do with all those capons," he laughs.

Well, they took care of those 50 birds and now the Peifers market about 700 capons annually. At one point they had as many as 1100, but have decided that 700 is about optimum.

Usually the Peifers market 80 percent of the birds dressed, but with the arrival of the avian influenza in Lancaster County, he was required to sell them all dressed this year. Dressing that many birds is no problem, but it did keep the whole family working to fill the orders at Thanksgiving and Christmas.

The Peifers market the capons both wholesale and retail and have customers who return year after year to get the birds, which many people prefer over other kinds of poultry. Mervin explained that the birds average from nine to 12 pounds at the time of dressing, and he adds, "The advantage over turkey meat is that it is a moister meat and there is a lot of white meat."

Of course it is not surprising to find the Peifers have several freezers full of the capon meat, and when asked how they like to eat it, Merv said, "You name it and we do it with capon meat."

Round-up for the 4-H capon projects has traditionally been held in conjunction with the Lancaster Kiwanis Club meeting. In recent years through the interest of Clarence Keener the Manheim Rotary expressed a desire to do something for 4-H, and offered a show and auction to members in the Manheim area. Eventually it expanded to include the Lititz Rotary, and it offers a nice opportunity for the 4-H'ers to market some of their birds.

Mervin recalls that one man helped bid the price of a capon up to $20, and although he was not the successful bidder, he thought that meant $20 per bird, not per pound! Last year the winning bird brought $16 per pound. According to Merv, this kind of auction "gives the kids something to work for."

Although some feel competition should be de-emphasized, Mervin says, "Competition creates interest. They have to try harder."

Children who take the 4-H capon project not only learn to raise the birds, but also how to dress them for market.

Since the class was initiated in 1978, Merv has displayed his expertise in the "best dressed capon" open classes at the Pennsylvania Farm Show. Each year he enters one bird in his name and one in his wife's, and each year he has come home with a wooden plaque for taking first place. What does it take? "You have to spend a little extra time. We semi-scald the birds," he states.

Usually the Peifers dress just two capons to enter, although this year they were forced to do a third one when they found that one they had selected has a blemish on its wing.

Merv says it's too soon to tell what effect the avain influenza will have on this year's capon project. "It's a question I can't answer," he says candidly. "I am hoping to go another two months before we say yes or no. I hope in that length of time we can get a green light. "There will be capons, but whether there will be a 4-H capon project we don't know."

The Peifers flock did not contract the ailment. He said, "Thankfully it did not seem to affect small flocks." The bulk of his capons were gone by Christmas and he will not be getting chicks until June.

During those years of slowly increasing his capon flock, Mervin was also milking cows. He said, "I milked cows for 40 years. I had to cut down and four years ago I sold the cows. I miss my cows." With a smile, he adds, "I don't miss the work."

Mervin is the fourth generation of his family to live at their present location at the tip of Manheim Township. Their historic home, built in 1792, sits over the spring which is the beginning of the Little Conestoga Creek. The farm, designated a Century Farm a few years ago, is in a very picturesque setting.

In addition to being a project leader, Merv has served four years on the 4-H Leaders Advisory Council, formed four years ago to advise and assist the Extension office in carrying out 4-H programs. One of the Council's big, on-going responsibilities has been to organize and carry out the 4-H Fair held each August as the culmination of the 4-H year.

Merv has severed on the food committee, and that first year, when the committee did the cooking and serving he could be found serving up pizza and other food from the Farm and Home Center kitchen. Emma Ruth was working beside him, just as hard. Now his responsiblity is to line up the food stands which are operated by 4-H clubs as fundraisers, and assist the clubs as they arrive. He says it goes a little more smoothly now, and about the Fair he says, "It takes some cooperation among the leaders or it will not materialize."

What is his biggest satisfaction over the years? Merv says, "If I can help a child. My motto used to be I'd rather see them with a smile on their face than a frown.' You can't please them all, but when a child tries, your efforts are worth it."

Merv is modest about his accomplishments as a 4-H leader, but it is precisely because of people like him that the 4-H program throughout Pennsylvania is successful.

Sitting at the kitchen table, with plaques from the Farm Show hanging behind them, are Mervin and Emma Ruth Peifer look through a 4-H file as they prepare for the 1984 4-H year. Mervin is currently a 4-H leader for the Elm-Penryn Club.

Mervin Peifer looks through his 4-H files in the kitchen of his farm home in Manheim Township. Mervin has completed his 29th year as a leader, working primarily with capon projects.

Having sold his dairy cows about four years ago, Merv still likes to keep some livestock on the farm. This is one of the few lambs that he raises each year. He also raises about 700 capons annually, but will not be getting them until June.

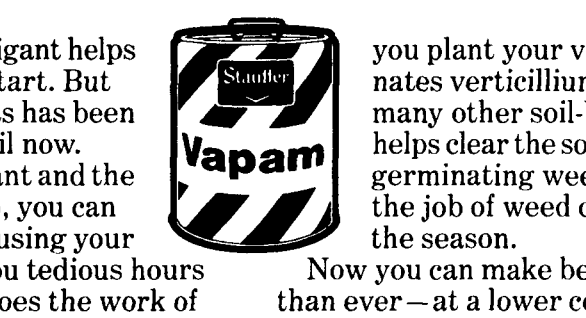
ANNOUNCING A BETTER WAY TO CLEAN YOUR SOIL

VAPAM® AND WATER

SOIL FUMIGANT



Treating your soil with a fumigant helps get your crops off to a better start. But one problem with soil fumigants has been getting even distribution. Until now.

Now, with Vapam soil fumigant and the Hydroflo Cheminjector® pump, you can thoroughly fumigate your soil using your irrigation water. That saves you tedious hours of application, and the water does the work of distributing Vapam uniformly through the soil. You get more complete coverage using less fumigant. Dairy Foods: A Necessary Part of Diet

SOUTHAMPTON — Though perhaps hard to believe, there are some 50 references to cows in the Old Testament. To the early people of Central Asia, wealth was measured in numbers of cattle. The cow was even worshipped in India, Babylonia, and Egypt.

What all this means, says Dairy Council Inc., Southamtpon, Pa., is that the cow has been around for a long time. And so has milk.

Although milk is processed, it is not an engineered or fabricated food. It naturally has three major components: water; fat including fat-soluble vitamins; and solids-not-fat, including protein, carbohydrate, water-soluble vitamins, and minerals.

In milk's liquid, the carbohydrate is dissolved, fat droplets are suspended, and protein is dispersed. Together with the vitamins and minerals, these nutrients interact in milk, making it a food unduplicated by modern science.

Milk has great nutritional value. It contains high-quality protein, stemming from the presence of many amino acids. Protein's major functions are to build and repair body tissues and to help form antibodies which circulate in the blood and fight infection. It also provides energy — about 33 of the 150 calories in an 8-ounce serving.

Milk's carbohydrate is a sugar called lactose. Lactose acids the absorption of calcium, phosphorus, and other minerals. It provides about 45 of the 150 calories in an 8-ounce serving.

Milkfat is a carrier of vitamins A, D, E, and K; these vitamins are important in the utilization of other nutrients. For example, vitamin D as well as lactose aids calcium absorption in the body.

Milk's major nutrients are calcium, phosphorus, magnesium, potassium, and sodium. Other minerals are also present in varying degrees. It is best known for its calcium content, the mineral essential for strong bones. In fact, dairy foods are the major source of this mineral in the American diet, providing nearly 72 percent of the available calcium in the American food supply.

Of nutrients available for consumption, dairy products excluding butter provide 20.7% of the necessary protein, 11.4% fat, 5.6% carbohydrate, 33% phosphorus, 20% magnesium, 12.3% vitamin A, 36.5% riboflavin, 10.8% vitamin B_6, and 18.6% vitamin B_{12}.

Compared to other foods, dairy products do not contain high amounts of cholesterol. A three-ounce fish fillet has 34-75 mg. cholesterol; half a roasted chicken breast without skin has 79 mg. One cup of milk has only 33 mg.

Dairy foods should be a part of every diet. For those advised to eat low-fat diets, than low-fat milk (1% — 115 calories, 2% — 135 calories, skim — 83-90 calories) can be chosen. Low-fat yogurt and cheeses can also be selected.

Without dairy foods, says Dairy Council, peoplke would quickly experience deficiencies of calcium, riboflavin, and probably vitamin D.

Grow Wildflowers at Home

NORRISTOWN — Have you romantic visions of fields of wildflowers just beyond your garden gate? Many do and it's just that picture that has led several seed growers to offer assortments of wild flower mixes to catalog buyers this year. However, few of us have the room or even the garden gate to make that vision a reality.

"Meadow in a Can," and regional wildflower mixes, may seem a bit like weeds in most landscaped areas near your house," says Paul N. Reber, Montgomery County Agent. Most of these mixes are annuals that rely on their own seed distribution to continue year after year. They need to be grown in open areas.

Wild flower mixes may be exactly what you want if you have the room — an unused back forty or fallow field. If you live in town and have an open area you'd like to seed, you may have difficulty with your local weed ordinance since the area will have to be left uncut most of the growing season so seeds can ripen.

Nevertheless, you might try some wildflowers in a small area or border where you will be able to control or contain them. But keep in mind that these mixes are often expensive. If your space and pocketbook are limited, you may do better by selecting specific species suited to your own garden conditions and buy seeds or plants of these types.

Put a Touch of the Irish in This Week's Meals

Who would have guessed that there were so many green foods? Thanks to all of our readers who used their imaginations to come up with these special green treats.

Since today is St. Patrick's Day, celebrate by serving green for dinner or for a Saturday night snack.

And may the luck of the Irish be with you!

LAYERED LETTUCE SALAD

1 head lettuce, torn
1 cup shredded carrots
1 (10 oz.) package raw frozen peas
1 sweet onion (a smaller amount of onion can be used)
1 cup celery
4 eggs, boiled and diced
1/2 cup green peppers, optional
8 slices crisp and crumbled bacon
2 cups mayonnaise
2 tablespoons sugar
grated cheddar cheese

Layer all dry ingredients in 9 X 12-inch pan or dish. Mix two cups mayonnaise and two tablespoons sugar. Spread on top as frosting. Top with grated cheddar cheese. Cover and refrigerate for about eight to 12 hours before serving. Keeps several days.

BEST COLESLAW

About 1 1/2 hours before serving or early in the day, in a large bowl, mix 1 cup mayonnaise, 2 tablespoons milk, 2 tablespoons cider vinegar, 1 1/2 teaspoons sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper. Add 1 medium head cabbage, shredded, and 1 large carrot, shredded. Toss gently until well coated. Cover and refrigerate about one hour to blend flavors.

LEMON-LIME JELLO SALAD

1 (3 oz.) package lemon gelatin
1 (3 oz.) package lime gelatin
2 cups water
16 large marshmallows
1 (3 oz.) package cream cheese
1/2 pint whipping cream
1 (number 2 1/2 can) crushed pineapple

In saucepan, heat water to boiling. Stir in both packages of gelatin. Add marshmallows, simmer gently to dissolve. Remove from heat. Stir in undrained pineapple. Chill until shaky, but not real firm. Whip cream, beat in cream cheese. Add to gelatin mixture and blend well. Chill several hours until very firm. Serve as a salad, not dessert.

Drain well, but reserve liquid. Chop spinach with food mill. Heat butter, blend in flour. Add bouillon cube to hot spinach liquid. Dissolve thoroughly. Blend in cream and remaining spices. Add butter-flour mixture and cook until thickened. Add chopped spinach to the sauce and boil, stirring until well blended.

"It may have been idle last year, but it'll be XL-61 this time around."

PIK took out a lot of corn acres around here last year. So it'll be nice to see XL-61 growing here again.

I've always been impressed with the quick start, strong stalks and healthy plants I get with XL-61. I'm even more impressed with the consistently high yields. And, while a lot of my customers plant XL-61 for its top-quality grain, just as many plant it for silage.

Now you know why I'm planting XL-61 this time around. And why most of my customers ordered it again.

If you're planting more corn this year, I hope you ordered enough XL-61. If you didn't, see your DEKALB-PFIZER dealer. Harvesting those extra bushels sure beats mowing weeds.

Who's planting more XL-61 this time around?

I am.

ANSWER - Susie English, Toano, Va., requested a recipe for candied cherries for fruitcake. Thanks go to B Oberholtzer for the recipe.

Candied Pineapple and Cherries

Drain two (one pound, 14 oz.) cans of sliced pineapples Reserve syrup Combine two cups sugar, ½ cup light corn syrup, and 1⅔ cups pineapple syrup in a heavy 10-inch skillet. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture boils. Cook until temperature reaches 234 degrees on candy thermometer

Add a third of the pineapple slices, bring to a boil Reduce heat; simmer for about 25 minutes or until pineapple is transparent around edges. Remove from skillet; drain on wire rack Repeat with remaining pineapple, cooking a third at a time. Then add three (8 oz.) jars of maraschino cherries, drained. Simmer for 25 minutes. Let dry 24 hours at room temperature.

ANSWER - L. Kramer, Cortland, N Y , requested a recipe for mincemeat, containing meat and spirits. Thanks go to R. Boyd, Alburtis, for the first recipe. The second was sent in by Colleen Shoemaker, New Woodstock, N Y

Stew beef in as little water as possible until tender; cook and chop into fine pieces. Add beef suet, chopped fine, and apples pared, cored and chopped, sugar, raisins, spices and rum. Mix thoroughly and cook one hour. Pack in clean jars, seal and store.

Christmas Mince

1 lb. beef, cooked well and chopped fine
1 cup beef suet, chopped fine

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The delightful island of St. Maarten is half Dutch, half French. They have had a peaceful coexistence for over 300 years. When I took a three-hour tour of the island last month, the temperature was a balmy 80 degrees

We drive west past the Great Salt Pond which is no longer in use but still forms salt Cows and goats roam freely but seem to stay off of the roads. Both stone fences and stick fences are used. We were told that there are more television sets than telephones on the island There are very large estates in the high hills with iron grill gates at the entrances

We had a half-hour stop at Marigot, the French seat of government and saw the public markets. I took pictures of the bunches of bananas piled on the wharf. We discovered that a dark green skinned banana is really sweet and ripe. Plantain, which is a staple food of the islanders, looked exactly like a banana to me.

We drove past coconut groves and small villages to Cole Bay Hill where we had a view of the lagoon and neighboring islands There is a large airport on the island, golf courses, and luxury hotels.

When we got back to Philipsburg, I went shopping with two sisters. In fifteen minutes, I bought an embroidered blouse and eight appliqued hand towels. They "shopped" for hours in order to find the particular tablecloth that they wanted. I finally left them; found a taxi and went back to the ship by myself where I was able to get a few hours of sun by the pool before dinner

At 11 p.m. all the passangers were invited to the Continental dining room to view and take pictures of a lavish display of very fancy dishes and ice sculptures. If we had waited until midnight, we were invited to eat the picturesque food spread on long tables. However since I felt that I was fed well enough, I skipped the food and went to bed.

Stars Born in Manheim FFA

BY KIMBERLY HERR

MANHEIM — Four new stars were born last Friday night.

They have nothing to do with Hollywood, and astronomy is not their field. Instead, these new stars have their roots in agriculture.

They are the Star Greenhand, the Star Chapter Farmer, the Star Agribusinessman and the Star Farmer named during the Manheim Central FFA Parent-Member banquet, held at the Ruhl's Grove United Methodist Church, Manheim.

Leon Heisey, son of Mrs. Miriam Heisey, Manheim R6, captured the Star Greenhand honor. The Star Chapter Farmer went to Jeannie Ginder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ginder, Elizabethtown R3. The Star Farmer was awarded to Jan Waltz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ardith Waltz, Manheim; and the Star Agribusinessman went to Ken Nolt, son of Mrs. Linda Nolt, Manheim R1.

The American Farmer award, which FFA President Kevin Moyer described as "a coveted degree received only by the best of the best," went to Glenn Shenk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Shenk, Lititz.

Kevin Moyer not only handed out awards, he also received them. He received the Lancaster County Banker's Award, a Keystone Degree and a Foundation award for public speaking.

Ken Nolt received the Production Credit Award for his excellent record keeping.

The following Foundation awards were also distributed to those students that excelled in certain fields:

Duane Shelly, fish and wildlife management; Stacey Shenk, placement in ag production; Gary Wiegand, sales and or service; Ken Hawkins, agricultural processing; Charles Greenly, fruit and vegetable production; Neal Benedict, diversified livestock production

Mark Metzler, home and farmstead improvement; Chad Hollinger, agricultural mechanics; Randy Gibble, beef production; Dave Wells, dairy production; Bryan Balmer, crop production; Don Yeagley, sheep production; Jay Gruber, soil and water management; Bryan Balmer, extemporaneous public speaking; Matt Pflieger, swine production; and Steve Breneman, poultry production.

Receiving Keystone Degrees were: Kevin Moyer, Duane Shelly, Stacey Shenk, Dave Wells and Gerald Wenger.

Fifteen students received their first-year Greenhand awards and 19 received their Chapter Farmer titles. Seven received Red Rose Degrees.

Honorary Chapter Farmer honors went to Ardith and Nancy Waltz, Jane Balmer and Robert Gibble. Citation Awards, given in recognition of the support given to FFA went to G and G Agway, Bomberger's Store and Pioneer Seed Company.

In addition to awards, the new officers for 1984-85 were announced. They are as follows: President, Ken Nolt; Vice President, Mark Metzler; Secretary, Rhonda Gibble; Treasurer, Bryan Balmer; REporter, Jeannie Ginder; Sentinel, Matt Pflieger; Chaplain, Leon Heisey; Historian Ken Hawkins; Corresponding Secretary, Jay Gruber; Chapter Sweetheart, Stef Shenenberger.

The program for the evening was presented by the Crestman Quartet, who entertained the parents, members and guests with some gospel music.

"You've got a big job ahead of you because you are going to be feeding the nation," one of the Quartet members told the FFA members.

Kevin Moyer, past president of the Manheim FFA, passes the presidential gavel on to Ken Nolt, the new president, during Friday's FFA parent-member banquet.

The much coveted star awards and the American Farmer award were given during Friday's banquet. Receiving those awards are Ken Nolt, Star Agribusinessman; Jan Waltz, Star Farmer; and Glenn Shenk, American Farmer.

Also receiving star honors are Jeannie Ginder, Star Chapter Farmer and Leon Heisey, Star Greenhand.

Octorara Young Farmers Presents Yearly Awards

BY LAURA ENGLAND

ATGLEN — The Octorara Young Farmers Association finished off a busy 1983, filled with educational seminars, social functions and community activities, with its 15th annual awards dinner Monday night.

President Leon Curtz said that 1983 activities were well attended. Among the activities were dairy and forage seminars, a tillage meeting, a shop safety workshop, farm tours and participation in the Pa. Food Exposition held in Philadelphia.

In addition, the Octorara Young Farmers had a successful year in dairy, hay and corn production, advisor Ivan Stauffer reported. Stauffer, in charge of calculating the yields and determining award winners, presented trophies to the top producers in high hay, haylage, high herd, high cow, silage and corn grain categories.

Melvin Stoltzfus, R1 Cochranville, was first place winner in the high hay contest. Second went to Nelson Stoltzfus, R1 Parkes, and third to William Stoltzfus, R1 Atglen. Tim Kauffman, R1 Atglen, capped the top award in haylage production, while Kenneth Umble, R1 Atglen, was second and Arthur Hershey, R1 Cochranville, was third.

High herd fat honors went to Melvin Stoltzfus, owner of Melwood Farms. Stoltzfus' 36 cows averaged 22,959 pounds of milk with 883 pounds of fat. Kenneth Umble was second with 19,140 pounds of milk and 725 pounds of fat on 59 cows. John Brubaker, R1 Christiana, brought his 59 cows into third place with 21,216 pounds of milk and 722 pounds of fat.

Stoltzfus again displayed his farming ability by taking first in the high cow fat contest. Sunlight produced 32,753 pounds of milk at a 3.7 percent butterfat test. Her total fat production was 1,212 pounds

Other high cow honors, from second to fifth place, went to: John Brubaker, Matty produced 27,423 pounds of milk with 4.4 percent fat; Tim Kauffman, Lacy produced 25,642 pounds of milk with 4 1 percent fat, Kenneth Umble, Rodella produced 29,599 pounds of milk with 3.5 percent fat; and William Stoltzfus, Rainbow produced 24,496 pounds of milk with 4.2 percent fat

In the corn grain contest, Glen Engle, R1 Cochranville, was the top producer with a yield of 232 bushels. Melvin Stoltzfus was second with 198, William Stoltzfus, third, with 191, Arthur Hershey, fourth, with 182, and Breck-A-Dee Farms, R1 Oxford, fifth, with 171 bushels.

The 1983 Dairy Judging Team made history for Berks County and Pennsylvania with their judging skill. They are: Harold Dietrich, Hamburg; Charles Seidel, Lenhartsville; Patricia Dreisbach, Hamburg; and Todd Miller, Hamburg.

Dairy Judging Team Honored at Banquet

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

FLEETWOOD — Berks County honored its outstanding 4-H achievers March 2 at the Fleetwood Grange Hall during the annual awards banquet of the Berks County 4-H Dairy Clubs. Families and 4-Hers from the five county clubs filled the hall as "cow talk" continued throughout the evening.

"We're real proud of this group," Carl Brown announced. He referred to the Dairy Judging team of Harold Dietrich, Patti Dreisbach, Todd Miller, and Charles Seidel who were each honored with an individual plaque for placing first in Pennsylvania and first in the All American contests. This was the first time that Pennsylvania had won at this level. Not only was this team best over 18 states at the Eastern National, they also were best in oral reasons. Although the first plaque the team won took some luck, Brown stated, the oral reasons award took a lot of practice.

Debbie Price was also honored for her receiving the $1000 scholarship for her 4-H dairy goat project. Debbie is currently attending Penn State with hopes of a career in veterinary medicine.

Project book and blueform winners were also honored. In the 8 to 9-year age group, Michelle Troutman, R1, Richland, from the Stouchsburg club took the blue ribbon. In the 10 to 11-year age group Scott Youse, R2, Oley, from Eastern Berks, took first lace. Heidi Schlegel, R3, Boyertown, from the Eastern Berks Club, took first place for 12 to 13 years of age. Doris Stump, R3, Bernville, from Western Berks took the blue for 14 to 15-year-old. Debbie Price, R2, Douglassville, from Eastern Berks, received first for 16 to 17-year-olds and Jan Adam, R2, Hamburg, from the Virginville club, took the blue for 18 to 19-year olds.

Blue from winners included: 10 to 11 years - Lisa Krick, R1, Lenhartsville, Virginville Club; 12-year-olds - Tammy Balthaser, R1, Bernville, Western Berks Club; 13-year-olds - Steve Rihrbach, Shoemakersville, Virginville Club; 14 to 15-year-olds - Mark Price, R2, Douglassville, Eastern Berks club, 16 to 17-year-olds - Debbie Price, R2, Douglassville, Eastern Berks Club; 18-year-old - Jan Adam, R2, Hamburg, Virginville Club.

This year a new contest was also initiated. Awards were given for the best secretary and treasurer's books. Tammy Balthaser, R1, Bernville, had the best secretary's book and Debbie Price won honors for the best treasurer's book.

Farmers wives pair off for their turn at the questions during a Family Feud game during the Berks Co. 4-H Dairy Banquet.

LaVerne Moser, Bally, announced the formation of a new group of dairy promoters within the county. Called the Southeastern Dairy Promoters, this newly formed group is seeking support from local dairymen to buy advertising time on radio to sell milk.

"Right here at home, let's get those sales going. Let's help ourselves from the bottom up," Mrs. Moser stated.

For approximately $20, a dairyman can support the group and have his name announced after the promotion on the radio. People to contact for more information on this program are: Robert Dreisbach, R3, Hamburg; Roy Christman, Shartlesville; or LaVerne Moser, Bally.

To enliven the banquet and test their own knowledge, the 4-H clubs selected two Berks dairy families to compete in the adaptation of the "Family Feud Game", popular on television. Labeled the "Farmer Feud", the families of Sandy Moser, Bally, and Tammy Balthaser, Bernville, pitted their dairy knowledge against each other.

Berks County Dairy Princess, Connie Ohlinger, Mohrsville, and the National Jersey Jug Queen, Patricia Dreisbach, Hamburg, were also on hand to present the awards. The awards were sponsored by more than 20 county businesses, and the banquet was catered by the Fleetwood Grange.

Traditional quilt patterns don't have to be limited to pieced-together fabrics for beddings and throw pillows. The patterns can easily be duplicated in stitchery for any number of projects.

The country quilt coasters shown here, for example, feature "star quilt" patterns on plastic canvas. Beginning or advanced needleworkers can embroider the patterns, yet the results are sophisticated enough for any decorating scheme.

To make two 3-by-3-inch coasters, kits are available by writing to the address below. Further information about stitching your own star patterns follows.

Star quilt patterns have been popular for generations. Designs like the ones shown here were invented in colonial times and handed down from mother to daughter to needleworkers today.

Star patterns were often inspired by the stars in the heavens, but many other objects inspired the patterns as well. Some hardly seem star-shaped, as indicated by their names.

According to the "Illustrated Index to Traditional American Quilt Patterns" (Arco Publishers), star patterns include Dove at the Window, Flying Saucer, Hopscotch, Formosa Tea Leaf, Chips and Whetstones, Mariner's Compass and Mexican Rose. The patterns range from simple to intricate, but all show a perfect balance of shape and color

Because colonial quilt makers didn't always limit the number, shapes and sizes of the pieces in a pattern, some star patterns are difficult to piece together into quilts. On plastic canvas, however, any pattern is fast and easy to stitch.

Here are directions for stitching star quilt patterns on plastic canvas:

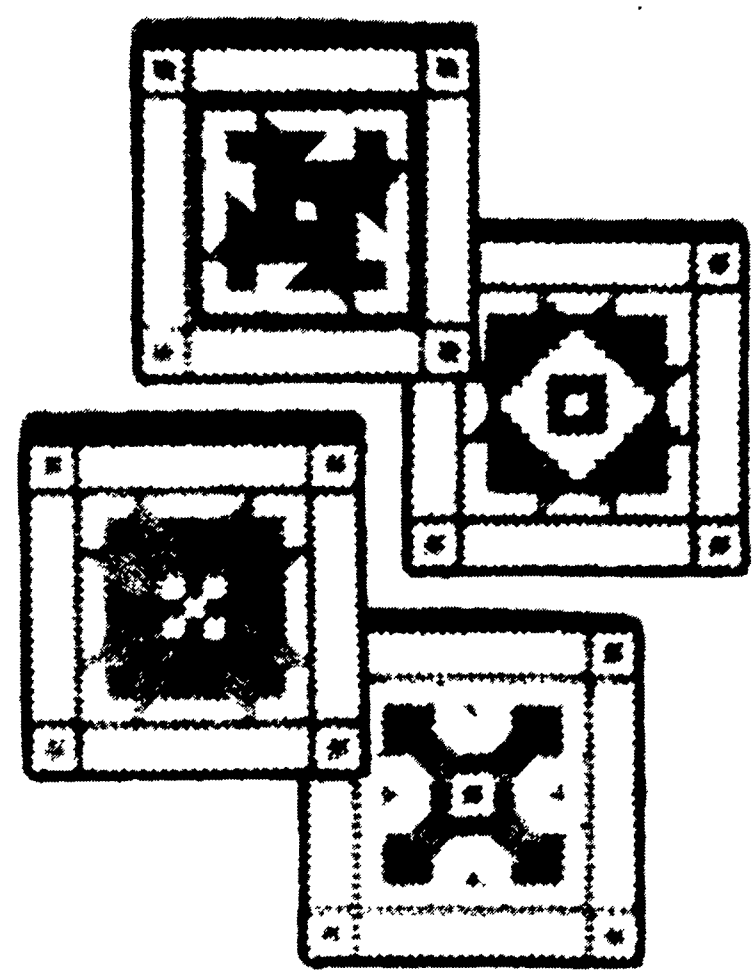
MATERIALS: Coaster kit; or plastic-point squares, yarns, tapestry needle, scissors, design chart or graph paper and pencil.

DESIGN: 1. Either use a design chart, or draw your own design on graph paper. 2. For your own design: Copy a star shown here, take a design from a traditional quilt book, or invent your own star quilt pattern.

DIRECTIONS: 1. Following your chart, work star points, corners and border blocks in the satin stitch. 2. Work outlines in the continental stitch. 3. Work background in the continental stitch. 4. Overcast edges.

SATIN STITCH: 1. Work stitches parallel, either in straight lines or diagonally, according to your preference. 2. Stitch straight lines over as many meshes as needed, from one side of the design to the other (a).

CONTIENTAL STITCH: 1. Begin at upper right-hand corner. 2. Work stitches from right to left according to illustration (b). 3. Turn canvas upside down to stitch the next row, again working from right to left.



"Country Quilt" Coaster Kits, by "Dimensions," contain 10-mesh plastic canvas for two 3-by-3-inch coasters, yarns, needle and instructions. Finished coasters are country blue with red and white accents.

Kit D-7090 $12 plus $2 postage and handling.

To order, send kit price (California residents please add 6½ percent sales tax) plus mailing and handling to Ellen Appel Crafts, your newspaper's name, Box 1144, Laguna Beach, CA 92652.

From deodorant to dog food, laundry soap to over-the-counter medications, the label "new, improved" makes it all better.

Or does it?

More than once I've growled and grumbled while trying to open a "new, improved" type container, spout, lid or boxtop. And too often, those "new, improved" ingredients found inside may be no better than what was there before, and will undoubtedly cost more.

Anyway, this all came to mind as I realized over the past few days that my lifestyle has become 'new, improved" in two small, but significant ways

First, culture has come to my calf feeding chores.

Well, maybe culture isn't exactly the term you'd use

It all depends on how you like rock music Or country Or that background, easy listening stuff they label "muzak," and play in your ear when you're put on hold on some telephone call.

Depending on who dials in the dairy barn radio, any of the above sounds may blare out toward the milking herd. To date, no study that I know of has ever determined which type radio music encourages the most contented cows or the highest production.

But last week, the farmer happened to come into ownership - free - of a roll of unwanted electrical communications wire and an orphaned stereo speaker. This unexpected good fortune was too much to just ignore.

With just a few perfunctory electrical hookups, he extended a speaker from the cows' radio up into the heifer-calf raising areas, for my listening enjoyment.

While I have a speaker, I lack a dial, thus have no choice over the selection, unless I parade down to the dairy barn and spin out someone else's earlier selection. That would undoubtedly get me in trouble, especially on the nights that the kids help to milk.

In fact, that first night that I fed calves accompanied by blaring rock music, the farmer did come up to check up on me and make sure I was feeding, not doing the Curly Shuffle with a bag of calf feed

And as if that wasn't enough to revolutionize my lifestyle, a request of some 15 years has finally gone through the resident engineering departmental head.

Since a round of remodeling that took place when the teenager was a wee babe, the bathroom closet location has been smack dab over top of the laundry area in the basement.

For this past decade and a half, I have periodically pleaded to have a hole cut in the bottom of the closet, so that the mounds of dirty barn clothes can simply dropped down to the washing machine.

Lo and behold, after this long time, a ten-minute bout with a noisy saw rendered a chuck of the floor on the basement cement and - viola! - you can now almost drop your dirty socks right in the spinning basket.

A dear friend who stopped by over the weekend took one look at my "new, improved" facilities and broke up in laughter. Seems that when she was a teenager, she became stuck in a similar laundry chute hole, while clowning around, and in humiliation had to be pushed-pulled out by her parents.

I think I'd better withhold a "new, improved" label until I see how many kids or cats I have to retrieve from the addition.

Stress: How Does it Affect Your Family?

BY KIMBERLY HERR

LANCASTER — The word stress, now commonly used to describe a human condition, was initially an engineering word.

"It describes how much pressure a building can take before it breaks," explained James E. Van Horn, Penn State Extension family specialist. "If it goes too far, the building will collapse. When we talk about it in human terms, it is the same thing."

Van Horn spoke on personal and family stress during last week's Lancaster County Poultry Day, held at the Farm and Home Center.

According to Van Horn, the causes of stress are as varied as the symptoms it produces. Some of those causes are machine breakdown, illness during a critical times, disease outbreak, such as the Avian influenza, high debt load, government regulations and, of course, the weather

"The mere fact that the farmer has no control over the weather causes stress," Van Horn said

"Farming produces a lot of stress in general," he continued "People in poultry farming who have not been hit with the Avian influenza are living under a tremendous amount of stress."

And the symptoms produced by these stressors include: dizziness, headaches, tight shoulders and neck, ulcer, upset stomach, fatigue and appetitite loss or increase.

"More people are suffering weight problems today than ever before," Van Horn said. "A great number of people with weight problems are using eating to cope with stress."

Some of the symptoms deal with emotions Stress may result in feelings of anger, guilt, fear or irritability Or nervous habits, such as tapping feet, twisting hair or biting nails, may develop.

A dangerous side effect, according to Van Horn, is the abuse of a substance, whether it is drugs, alcohol, food or over-the-counter drugs. Van Horn said some people believe that drug companies' stock would go down and some would even go bankrupt, if Americans could find a way to better deal with stress.

And, as Van Horn explained, when an individual is under stress, the family is usually under stress, since most everyone is part of some family unit.

"The family is like a mobile and when stress affects the family that mobile gets out of line and if it gets bad enough, it will collapse," Van Horn told his audience.

Van Horn referred to actions produced by stress as indicators. He put those indicators into two groups, Level I and Level II.

Level I indicators are parental conflicts and sibling conflicts, "the day in and day out, with no let up kind of thing," Van Horn explained.

Parent-child conflicts that lead to a break down in communication are another indicator. Van Horn explained it this way: "the kid who won't talk - the parent who badgers the kid."

Increased anger and increased rules and regulations are also results of family stress, as are child and adolescent behavior problems.

"Kids do not runaway from home," Van Horn said. "Parents propel kids out of the home."

If children come from a family with a lot of stress pile up, Van Horn explained, they are "pretty likely to become dependent on some substance or some kind of relationship outside of the family.

"Kids are tremendous barometers on how well a family is doing," he said.

Van Horn, who is the father of five, explained that Level I problems can become Level II problems, including physical and verbal hostility, spouse or child abuse.

"Family stress and child abuse are intimately linked," Van Horn said.

Other Level II indicators are divorce, separation, the inability to work or the termination of work.

"If we had just one stress to deal with, we would do very well, but stress, like pancakes, will pile up," Van Horn said.

However, there are ways of relieving the stress, according to Van Horn. He recommened physical exercise or physical activity, "the kind of exercise that we might do to relax our bodies."

For example, Van Horn said, try squeezing your eyes tightly shut for five seconds and then opening them as wide as you can. This exercise, according to Van Horn, will help if you have been working with figures or using your eyes for other tedious work.

Or try pushing your hands against an imaginary wall for five seconds or just shrug your shoulders as hard as you can a couple of times.

"Talk about what it is that bothers you," Van Horn recommended. "The less we talk about what is bugging us the more it will show up in ulcers and physical problems."

In conclusion, Van Horn urged those present to recognize stress and to do something about it.

"You can be the master of your own ship," he concluded.

"The family is like a mobile and when stress affects the family that mobile gets out of line and if it gets bad enough, it will collapse," Van Horn told his audience.

HOW DO YOU FIND RELIEF?

It's March...almost time to put the potatoes into the ground except that it is still covered with snow! The sneak preview we got of spring fades into winter doldrums with the snow and sleet returning to the scene. I'm finding it difficult to get up and get going – particularly outside.

This seems to be the nightmare season for parents too The recurring nightmare is one of fear of waking up to another day of snow, sleet, or rain and the kids crying, "What can we do?"

I learned early in my life back home on the farm that "What can I do now?" was not always a good question to ask if you were going to be selective about the options given. My mother is a great list maker and in three seconds flat she could quote a list of possibilities. The list always included an array of chores that needed to be done as the work really is never finished on the farm. But I don't have to think long to come up with fond memories of rainy/snowy day activities. If you can relate to this scenario, read on for a few suggestions to keep the kids occupied until the storm blows over.

PLAN A TRIP - This can have many variations. A blanket over a cardtable could transport my sisters and I to a camping trip almost anywhere. Or, have your children choose a place to travel as pictured in an old magazine. Then cut and paste pictures of places they'd like to stay, meals they want to eat, things they want to do and see. The key is to make it a long trip!

RADIO - Haul out the portable tape recorder, put on a blank cassette and have the kids make up their own radio show. To incorporate the "sharing" concept have one be the news reporter, another be the announcer, and one or two give the commercials

TAKE OVER THE TOWN - Try a new "make believe" - a city government. Take over the town by electing a mayor. Run a campaign complete with signs, elections and speeches. After all, it is a campaign year!

PUT ON A PUPPET SHOW - Find those forgotten puppets or make some from paper bags, old socks, or plates and popsickle sticks. Have the children plan the script, sound effects and practice. You might need to give a short presentation of your own to get them into the spirit of things. Be prepared to attend the show once it is ready and offer your applause.

Other ideas which you can expand on and adapt to your children or household include:

Baking together.

Cleaning out the toy boxes and shelves together and rediscover long forgotten toys.

Work together on a household chore, and then spend time together at a board game or puzzle.

Finally, if you try all these ideas and still can't keep the little ones out of trouble, then put on their boots and coats and send them out to play!

Good Diet Helps Your Baby's Growth

YORK — Only 17 days after conception, a baby will begin to develop blood vessels and blood pools Even at this early stage of development, the food you eat will affect the health of your child, says A Joan Lamberson, Extension home economist.

As early as two weeks after conception, a developing fetus needs protein, iron, and vitamin C. The source of these nutrients is the milk, meat, fruits and vegetables that the mother eats

In the third week of development, the heart and brain begin to develop, and the child needs even more protein The eyes also begin to develop around this time, so vitamin A is needed from the fruit and vegetable group

During the fourth week of pregnancy, the baby's ears and nose begin to develop. The baby then needs protein, riboflavin, niacin. Good sources of these nutrients are the meat and milk groups and the bread group.

The nervous system also begins to form in the fourth week, making thiamine, niacin and calcium essential for the child's growth. At this time, the expectant mother should be eating plenty of foods from the bread group

The eight week marks the beginning of the skeleton and the need for protein, calcium, vitamin D and phosphorus. The meat and milk groups will supply these

From the fifth month of pregnancy up to full term, the general features and characteristics remain the same The structure of the baby is patterned in the first four months of pregnancy

But it is still important for the mother to eat well A good, healthy diet may mean fewer complications during the pregnancy, less chance of having a premature baby, a healthier baby and less chance of birth defects

Consider 4-H Hog Projects

Now is a good time to start planning for the 1984 Wayne County 4-H and FFA Market Hog Feeding Project.

This project is open to all 4-H members between the ages of eight and 19 and all FFA members enrolled in an area vocational agriculture program.

This 4-H and FFA project will begin in April when the member takes delivery of two feeder pigs weighing between 35 and 45 pounds a piece. Crossbred feeder pigs make very good market hog projects and are efficient converters of feed to lean, red meat.

Some of the requirements needed for this project include: a sturdy shed or barn with adequate room for two hogs, adequate ventilation during the summer months or a source of shade, a wood or metal trough for feed, a container for water or a self-waterer, a source of bedding to keep the hogs clean and dry and a source of good, high quality feed. Young feeder pigs may also need some special care if the weather is cold during April. This might include a source of supplemental heat plus extra bedding.

Once the feeder pigs have adjusted to their facilities the project members main concern is to feed the hogs with plenty of high quality feed. The average market hog will consume at least 600 pounds of feed in order to reach a market weight of 200 pounds or more. Market hogs must weigh at least 165 pounds in order to participate in the Junior Livestock Sale.

Growing feeder pigs should be treated for internal and external parasites several times during this feeding period. Information on materials to use to eliminate these parasites can be obtained by contacting the Wayne County Extension Office.

During the summer months the 4-H of FFA member will have to work at fitting the hogs and also training them to respond to a show" stick or cane A 4-H and FFA hog showmanship and fitting meeting will be held in July to help the project members learn these important skills.

One of the highlights of this project is exhibiting the market hogs at the Wayne County Fair. The 4-H or FFA member will exhibit both market hogs in the Wayne County Junior Market Hog Show. All of the market hogs are exhibited and judged according to different weight classes. The project members also compete in their own age group for showmanship and fitting honors.

The other highlight for members in this project is at the Junior Livestock Sale. This sale, which is held on Saturday evening of the Wayne County Fair, gives the 4-H member an opportunity to sell their high quality meat animals to interested buyers.

Market hog project members must also keep a record of all expenses in raising the market hogs. Expenses would include cost of feed, equipment, veterinarian fees, cost of repairing or maintaining housing, trucking to the fair and other expenses incurred in raising the market hogs.

The Wayne County Extension Office is currently accepting orders for 35 to 45 pound feeder pigs to be used as market hog projects. The deadline for ordering project feeder pigs from the Extension Office is March 26th.

The delivery date on these feeder pigs will be between April 5 and April 16. 4-H or FFA members ordering feeder pigs will be asked to pay a $50 deposit on each pig ordered. The actual price on each feeder pig will be determined when they are picked up and delivered to the member's farm.

The Wayne County Extension Office will also maintain a list of area hog producers that may have feeder pigs for sale in April. Feeder pigs born in January or early February of 1984 should make good project animals.

The absolute deadline for starting the 4-H or FFA Market Hog Feeding Project is May 1st.

If you are interested in this 4-H or FFA project or would like some additional information, contact the Wayne County Extension Office by dialing 253-5970, extension 114. You can also receive the information by visiting the Extension Office which is located in the basement of the Wayne County Courthouse.

Fulton Grange

Master Thomas Galbreath presided at the meeting of Fulton Grange March 12 at 8 p.m. when the Charter was draped in memory of Sherman L. Hill.

Four names were submitted for membership. The Grange decided to make two additional volleyball courts this spring. It was also decided to repair the ceiling of the Grange Hall and install a new ceiling and lights in the kitchen.

Farmers were asked to attend a county tax meeting March 22, 7:30 p.m. at the Farm And Home Center, Lancaster, when reassessment vs. increased tax mills will be discussed. Sandy Galbreath, AnnaBell Wiley, Marian Holloway, Dorothy Stauffer and Thomas Galbreath gave reports from Regional Day at Virginville, Berks County, March 10 and said that seven members of Fulton Grange attended.

Lectureer Sandra Galbreath presented the program. She introduced Kay Weaver of Quarryville who sang "This Land Was Made For You and Me," "I Was Raised On The Love In Jesus", and "Thank You For The Roses."

Wanda Galamore, York, will speak on the deaf program, do sign language and sign a song at the next meeting March 26. Youth Night will be observed April 9 when the youth committee will be in charge of the program and Open House will be observed April 23rd.

Lancaster County Pomona Grange will meet April 21, 8 p.m. at Fulton Grange Hall. The Lecturer Dorothy Berry requests all the Grange Ladies to fashion Easter bonnets made from things around the house for this meeting.

Beware! Bathing Suit Season Ahead

NEWARK, Del. — Now that warm weather is on the way, thoughts turn to the great outdoors, sunshine, beach blankets, and yes, bathing suits. Is imagining yourself in last year's suit enough to make you want to move to Alaska?

Hearty winter appetities and lack of exercise have taken their toll on many a figure. If yours is among them, don't fret Start now and you can lose that spare tire by summer, says Karen Stelger, a University of Delaware dietetics student working with Extension EFNEP Coordinator Marguerite Krackhardt

Doctors and dietitians recommend a slow, gradual weight loss of one to two pounds per week. Since on pound of fat equals 3,500 calories of energy, you need to burn 3,500 to 7,000 extra calories each week to lose one or two pounds. To burn up that energy you can either decrease your daily food instake by 500 to 1,00 calories, increase your daily activity by 500 to 1,000 calories, or combine the two approaches.

Decreasing your food intake by 500 calories isn't too hard, Stelger says. It just takes some will power and willingness to change. Start paying attention to the little extras you may eat without thinking. For instance, five tablespoons of butter, 11 tablespoons of sugar, or 10 chocolate chip cookies each add up to 500 calories. You could eliminate 500 calories in one day by doing without three tablespoons of sugar in your coffee and cereal, two tablespoons of butter on your toast and potato, and the three cookies you usually have before bed.

On the exercise side, you could burn up your 500 calories with 110 minutes of slow bicycling (5.5 mph); 75 minutes of tennis; 45 to 100 minutes of swimming (depending on your speed); or walking 6¼ miles in 125 minutes.

Because it's hard to cut out all the foods you love, and just as hard to find two free hours for bicycling every day, Stelger says a combination of calorie reduction and exercise makes sense. You could cut out two tablespoons of sugar (from coffee or grapefruit) one tablespoon of butter (from toast or vegetables) and one cookie or other snack or dessert, then go out walking for an hour with a friend. Do this every day for a week and you've said goodbye to your first pound.

If you need a strict weight loss regime to follow, you'll find plenty to chose from. Just be sure to pick a sensible plan. Stelger offers these guidelines·

DO choose a long-term plan. Slow, gradual weight loss is safest and most effective.

DO talk to your doctor before starting any serious weight loss program, especially if it involves strenous exercise or a loss of more than 10 pounds. A phone call may be all you need to get his or her okay.

DO choose a balanced diet, with foods from all four food groups plus fats and oils. Your body needs a balanced diet to stay healthy and to meet its nutrient needs.

DO choose a diet you can follow. Exotic foods or expensive items aren't necessary. Weight loss shouldn't cost money.

DON'T choose a plan that promises fast weight loss These plans are not nutritionally sound and are potentially dangerous to your health The weight you lose from such plans is mostly water, which you'll regain when the diet ends.

DON'T rely on special pills or drugs, which can interact with medication or have other side effects.

DO remember that weight loss takes will power, preseverance, and a little sweat.

DO call a doctor, registered dietitian, or the University of Delaware Cooperative Extension Service if you have questions or want more information.

Direct marketers to meet

CLARKS SUMMIT — All retail farm marketers are invited to attend a direct marketing conference on Thursday at 9:30 a.m. in the Ramada Inn, Clarks Summit. The Lackawanna County Horticultural Association and the Penn State University Cooperative Extension Service have teamed up to organize the meeting.

William Yerkes, of None Such Farms in Bucks County, will share the retail marketing experiences of three generations of his family. Operating one of the most widely known farm markets in the state, Yerkes will explain the marketing ideas that have been most successful in his operation.

Suggestions for increasing sales at farmers markets will be given by Larry Yager, Extension retail marketing specialist, who will also explain some of the marketing ideas he got from British farmers during a recent trip to England.

New marketing opportunities for asparagus and potatoes will be explained by Peter Ferretti and Richard Cole, both of the Extension horticultural staff at Penn State University.

In addition to the speakers on the program the meeting will provide an opportunity for retailers to meet with commercial exhibitors offering products and services to increase profits at farm markets.

The Ramada Inn is located on Routes 6 and 11 just off Exit 58 of Interstate 81. Registration and lunch combined are $5 but no advance reservations are needed.

Pizza Lovers Buy Blindfolded

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — You may as well be blindfolded when you buy frozen meat pizza. Why? Because 75 percent of those pizzas use fake cheese - but consumers are not aware of it.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) controls the content and labeling of frozen meat pizzas. Current USDA policy permits manufacturers to use 90 percent fake cheese and only 10 percent real cheese. Only the ingredient list must indicate that this imitation or substitute cheese is used. But the ingredient list is not required to say how much of the cheese is fake.

According to USDA studies, most consumers do not read ingredient lists. Even if consumers did read ingredient lists, they would have to be dedicated to wade through the typical frozen meat pizza label. Some run nearly a foot in width and an inch long and contain 150 words or more.

This consumer deception could end if enough interested people tell USDA what they want. USDA has proposed a new policy. The new policy would require a stated minimum amount of cheese on frozen meat pizza, and half that minimum would have to be real cheese. If any fake cheese is used, the name of the product must say so.

The pizza manufacturing industry is divided over this issue. Manufacturers who use mostly imitation or substitute cheese do not like the idea of telling consumers this on the front of the package where it is clearly visible.

Pizza makers who use only 100 percent cheese strongly support the government's new proposal. They believe consumers ought to know exactly what they are buying.

The dairy industry likes the proposal too. While real cheese sales would only be marginally increased under the plan, an industry representative Gordon Riehl, general manager of Milk Marketing Inc. (MMI), a regional dairy marketing cooperative, said, "It's time this deception ends. Without a declaration on the front of a food package where people will notice it, very few people know they're buying pizza with fake cheese. If that's what they truly want, that's okay, but they should be able to tell without a magnifying glass and a degree in food science. We applaud USDA for this new proposal."

USDA is now collecting opinions for their new cheese regulation. Interested consumers should write to USDA before April 2, 1984. Contact: USDA Regulations Office, Annie Johnson, FSIS Hearing Clerk, Docket No. 78-733E, Food Safety & Inspection Service, USDA, Room 2637, South Agriculture Bldg., Washington, D.C. 20250.

Ladies Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

MARCH IS NATIONAL NUTRITION MONTH

— Do you have the midwinter blahs about exercise?

— Do all your meals seem the same?

— Do you wonder about the effect of what you eat on your health?

— Do you feel helpless to resist temptation when you enter a supermarket?

— Do you need some moral support to control your weight?

Well, the Penn State Extension Service can help you revitalize your attitude toward food, exercise and grocery shopping. Your Extension office has a Family Health Calendar available for the month of March that gives you a nutrition or health tip to think about each day. It's perfect to post on the refrigerator door for the whole family to read. These tips encourage you to — Keep the load on your feet (your body) fit.

— To avoid overeating and maintain your weight.

— To eat sensibly because sensible eating promotes good health.

March has been declared National Nutrition Month by the American Dietetic Association for several years now. March ushers in Spring, a season of renewal. So it is a good time to review our personal food shopping, eating and exercise habits. You will want to reinforce good food and health habits and replace bad ones. This calendar can help you do that.

Each week of the month the calendar promotes one major theme. The first week the daily tips all encourage you to include fiber rich foods in your diet. Dietary fiber plays an important role in keeping you "regular" and in your general intestinal health. Good food sources are whole grains, legumes, nuts, vegetables and fruits. This variety of sources should allow you to choose high fiber foods and appeal to you and your family.

The effect of your food choice on your health is stressed the second week. Most people know that the amount of fat you eat affects the health of your heart. But did you know that the amount of calcium you eat now may affect your chances of having bone fractures when you are older? Dietary calcium intake affects the course of Osteoporosis, a disease of old age that is especially a problem for older women. So the advice for March 13, 1984 suggests that you "Drink milk now. Prevent broken hips later."

Tips on cutting calories are presented the third week. These can be used by people who want to maintain their present weight as well as those who wish to lose some extra pounds. For example, how many of you remember that nature provides "a diet soda?" It contains minerals, is calorie free and is necessary for life. You guessed it - the diet soda is water. However the best thing about it may be that it does not leave you hooked on a "sweet" taste, the downfall for many overeaters. So "Drink water, nature's diet soda" on March 20, 1984 and start a habit.

The last week's tips address food shopping and food preparation, one of the first steps in anyone's path to good health. Reading labels can help you set a healthful table. It's one of several defenses against impulse buying in the supermarket.

This calendar's tips encourage you to practice moderation in the amounts of food you eat and at the same time enjoy a wide variety of foods in your diet. We hope it will help you and your family along the road to good health.

DRAPERIES DON'T LAST FOREVER

Spring seems to be the time when you take a hard look at draperies. Do you clean them? Launder them? Replace them?

Lined draperies usually have a life span of about five years, unlined ones ones four years and sheers three years.

Even this timetable is subject to revision. The drapery's life depends on the fabric used in construction, and exposure to sunlight, humidity and oxidation (fumes from furnaces, ovens and automobile exhausts).

Proper care is another important factor in prolonging the draperies' life and apperance. If possible, rotate drapery panels from one side of the window to the other to equalize sun damage. Regular cleaning also stretches the life span of the fabric because embedded soil causes fiber deterioration.

Don't let draperies touch the glass, blow against screens or become wet during rainstorms or through winter water condensation. The fabric may watermark and the stain not be noticed until spring cleaning. By that time, the stain cannot be removed. Draperies that are allowed to blow against a screen can become ruined, if the fabric catches on sharp screening or becomes caught in sliding doors.

When you buy new draperies or replace old ones, choose preshrunk fabrics and ones that are as resistant as possible to sun-fading. Draperies are often a major investment in homes; protect your investment through proper care.

4-H Horse Club

Fairmounters 4-H Horse Club members visited the Sterling Brook Farms Trauma Center recently. The club toured the facilities. They saw X-rays of a four-month old colt with a broken hind fetlock and learned how broken legs are surgically repaired. Finally, the club saw a colt in a cast after six months of treatment. Their next meeting will be held at the Community House in Fairmount.

Sale limit adjusted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Effective Feb. 28, the USDA began adjustment of the dollar value of meat and poultry products that retailers can sell to hotels, restaurants and similar nonhousehold consumers without being subject to federal inspection.

"The limit on a retailer's annual sales to institutional consumers will decrease from $30,200 to $28,800 for meat, while poultry will increase from $23,100 to $25,500," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

Under federal law, retail meat and poultry merchants are exempt from federal inspection if their total dollar sales and the percentage of those sales to institutional customers do not exceed these limits.

Each year, the retail sales limit is automatically adjusted if the consumer price index fluctuates at least $500, upward or downward, for meat and poultry products. The percentage of meat and poultry sales to "nonhousehold" institutional customers may not exceed 25 percent of a retailer's total annual sales.

Houston said data published by the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics for 1983 indicate a price decrease of 4.7 percent in meat products and an increase of 10.2 percent in poultry products. The price for meat products decreased about $1,400 and the price for poultry products increased by $2,400.

Try Walking for Exercise

MEDIA — For most of us, the ordinary activity of daily living simply does not provide enough exercise to develop and maintain good muscle tone or cardiovascular and respiratory fitness. Fitness programs which require setting blocks of time aside to go to a gym are sometimes difficult to work into our schedules.

Why not try walking, asks Greta C. Vairo, Extension home economist, as it is relatively mild exercise and medical advice is usually not required before beginning a walking program. Walking falls within almost everyone's financial resources and abilities, can be done any time of day or night, can be done inside or outside, and helps your body systems function better. It is one of the most efficient forms of exercise - the only one you can safely follow all the years of your life.

There are many benefits in a walking exercise routine. 1. Your metabolism goes up and your blood pressure may come down. 2. Blood choleserol and sugar levels tend to fall, especially if you lose excess body fat. 3. Oxygen supplied to the various parts of the body may improve. 4. Your overall physical condition should improve and you should sleep better. 5. In addition, walking slows the bone demineralization process, particularly in the legs. Bones remain tougher, less likely to break, and the range of motion is improved.

How should you start a walking plan? It will be much easier to stick to your program if you walk at a definite time every day and have a definite distance to cover each day. Keep track of the time it takes to complete the distance for several weeks. This will give you a sense of progress. But don't over do it. At the first sign of tiredness, stop and rest and begin again when rested.

You will know you are on the right track when you begin to feel warmed up after 15 minutes of your walking routine. It may take a while to reach that stage, but don't feel you need to rush. Don't feel you have to walk any special distance during the first phase of your program. As your physical endurance improves you may wish to increase distances and reduce times.

— In midlife, you tend to eat less in an effort to keep weight under control. Consequently nutrition often suffers. Daily exercise permits greater food intake and better blood circulation, which improves each cell's nourishment while preventing obesity.

— Late-onset diabetes is almost entirely reversible by exercise if you are overweight.

— Arthritics can perhaps benefit the most farm exercise - provided it is increased slowly but steadily.

— Exercise improves the quality of life. Research comparing exercise to a widely prescribed tranquilizer found exercise to be superior in relaxing and elevating mood - with none of the drug's side effects. Start walking!!

Ag Scholarships Offered by Grange

THURMONT, Md. — Rodman Myers, chairman of the Maryland State Grange Agriculture Scholarship Committee, announced the Maryland State Grange will offer two separate scholarships this year.

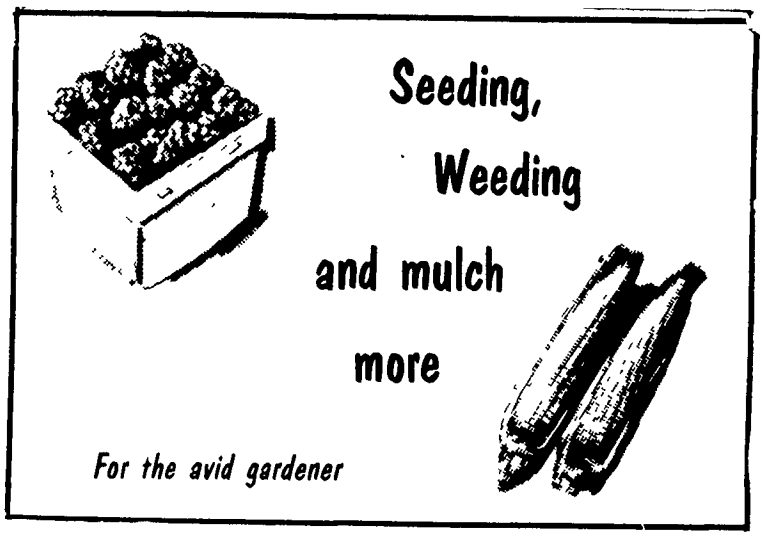
Three $300 past masters scholarships will be awarded to recipients who are enrolling in agriculture at a community college in Maryland.

Two $500 Edward F. Holter University of Maryland Agriculture Scholarships are available to students enrolling in agriculture at the University or enrolling in a two-year program at the University of Maryland Institute of Applied Agriculture in 1984.

Deadline for applications is May 1, 1984.

Myers stated the grange is always interested in maintaining quality education and is able to do this by offering the agricultural scholarship program.

Members of the committee who may be contacted for further information are; Rodman Myers, 271-2104; Paul Stull, 898-9345; John Stiles (Carroll County) 346-7100; Winfield Archer (Harford County) 838-7353; Robert Stansfield (Howard County) 465-3281; Harold Wolfe (Prince Georges County) 769-2820; Walton Mason (Cecil County) 658-6447; Charles Huff (Washington County) 824-7610; Roy Walls (FFA Executive Secretary) 898-3094; Kenneth Wisner, 845-8450; and Dave Miller, 635-2001.



One reason to prune is to remove dead, diseased, damaged, or insect-infested parts. Late this winter, look for broken branches and twigs from the accumulation of snow and ice. Prune these back to a strong side branch to stimulate new growth in that direction. Don't be tempted to tie, tape, or prop broken branches together in hopes they will heal themselves, advises C.R. Bryan, Jr, Delaware County Extension director. By this time, the wood has dried and is incapable of growing together again.

As you look for winter damage, check small trees and shrubs for rabbit injury. Look for telltale shortened branches and twigs and gnawed bark on large branches and trunks. You may also find mouse damage at the base of plants where they have chewed the bark. Rabbit and mouse injury are most common in areas where there has been an extensive snow cover most of the winter.

Pruning to treat animal injury is mostly a matter of finishing the job. Either remove shortened stems altogether, or prune them back to a side bud or shoot so new growth can fill in the gaps. If most or all of the lower branches have been eaten away, cut away some of the top branches as well to stimulate new wood and growth from roots. In a year or so, your plant should have new branching close to the ground.

Where animals have injured the bark on trunks and stems, evaluate the extent of damage before you prune. If more than half the bark has been chewed from around a branch, it may be too weak to function properly. Cut if off altogether or prune it back below the damage. If much of the bark on the trunk has been gnawed, the loss may affect the life expectancy of your plant. However, unless all the bark is gone, you may want to keep the plant and see if it survives. The greater the bark injury, the more likely your plant will have problems in the future.

Since the irregular pattern of animal damage will not allow wounds to heal properly, speed the healing process by shaping the wound. Cut away all irregular edges of bark. The shape of the "new" wound should be elliptical and parallel to the line of the damaged branch or trunk. You may have to cut away some good bark, but the clean wound will heal much faster than if left alone.

If you have discovered serious damage to large trees from wind, ice or snow, let a professional arborist help. Split trunks and large broken limbs high in trees need specialized equipment to repair. Don't be tempted to do the work yourself. Large limbs are much heavier than they appear and could cause you and your property injury if not handled properly.

Another reason to prune is to improve the shape and vitality of your shrubs and trees. If you have little or no winter damage, you may still need to prune to change plant density. Those that are too thick and full can be thinned in the center to allow more air and light to enter. Plants that are leggy, can be pruned to stimulate a fuller and denser growth.

Remove Carpet Stains

YORK — No matter how careful you are, keeping your carpet spot free is difficult. Success in removing the stain depends on the carpet fiber, the substance spilled and the time lapse before it is removed, says Marcell A. Seckman, York County Extension home economist.

To get a jump on removing stains, keep blotting materials such as paper towels, facial tissues, paper napkins, white sheeting and bath towels on hand. Other stain removal supplies include liquid rug shampoo, liquid detergent that is used for dishes, white vinegar and dry cleaning solvent.

If something is spilled on your rug, act quickly; the longer the stain remains, the tougher it becomes to remove.

Absorb as much of the stain as possible by blotting. Be sure to blot with a light touch to help prevent the stain from spreading or working into the fibers. Scrape up thick or solid substances with a spoon or the dull edge of a knife or spatula.

Pretest any cleaner before using it to make sure it is the right one for the stain. Call a professional carpet cleaner for advice if dyes bleed or the fibers change in appearance.

Use dry cleaning slovents sparingly and in a well-ventilated area.

When using any cleaner, apply in small amounts and work gently from the edges of the soiled area toward the center to avoid spreading the spot or stain. Blot up extra moisture as you go.

Dry the carpet quickly. Absorb as much moisture as possible by placing a dry bath towel or other blotting material over the damp area. Allow six hours to dry. A fan or hair dryer will help speed drying time, especially in humid weather.

When the area is completely dry, brush the pile gently to restore the nap and vacuum thoroughly.

If you have any doubts or questions about removal of a particular stain, consult a professional rug cleaner for advice.

Hawn Named Beef Queen

GETTYSBURG — Tina Hawn, of Gettysburg, has been selected the 1984 Adams County Beef Queen by the Adams County Beef Producers Association. The runner-up is Amy Sherman and the third contestant was Donna Byers. Miss Hawn will represent the Association and the beef industry at various activities during the year.

The formal crowning of Miss Hawn will be at the eighth annual Beef Ball and Parade of Bulls to be held March 31 at the York Springs fire hall. Tickets are $20 per couple and that includes beef hors d'oeuvres, made by some of the members, available during the cocktail hour at 6 p.m., dinner at 7 p.m. and dancing to the music of The Executives following the program. After the queen ceremony, and door prize drawings, the bulls will be paraded among the quests. The parade of bulls is being arranged by Craig Peterson and will include a charolais bull from Grime's South Mt. Farm, a polled hereford shown by David Shultz of Mechanicsburg, and an Angus from Hoffman Angus Farm in Dover.

Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, secretary of the PA Cattleman's Association and the secretary of the Beef Council, and Paul Heffner, president of the PA Cattleman's Association will be in attendance.

The public is invited and tickets and information can be obtained from Mary Grimes at 334-1022, or Faith Peterson at 259-0250.

Good fruit set vital in watermelons

NEWARK, Del. — Watermelons are a high value crop in Delaware, but they require extensive management for profit. University of Delaware extension vegetable specialist Ed Kee estimates about 2,000 acres of this popular fruit are grown annually in the state. He's been working closely with producers over the past few years in an effort to help them grow and market their melons more effectively.

"Most growers feel that if they can get good early fruit set, they'll stand a better chance for profitable returns," the specialist says. "When you analyze your yield per acre and relate this to the number of melons produced per plant, the need for good fruit set becomes even more obvious."

Because watermelon vines run together and overlap, it's hard to get a handle on just how many melons per plant are harvested in a commercial field. Estimates range from one per plant to three or four. "By setting up a hypothetical example on paper," Kee says, "you can start to zero in on the yield per plant in your own operation."

A spacing of 6 feet by 3 feet gives 2,420 plants per acre. If one 20-pound melon is harvested from each plant, that means a yield of 48,000 pounds an acre. At 8- by 4-foot spacing, or 1,361 plants per acre, the yield with one 20-pounder per plant is 27,220 pounds per acre.

The above illustration shows two things: first, that spacing can affect yield, and second, that even one full-grown melon per plant can result in good yields at the closer spacing. "The hard question growers must ask themselves is whether it's realistic to expect one melon per plant, or one large and one smaller melon-or some other combination-at the various possible spacings," Kee says.

Understanding the factors which affect fruit set in watermelons will make such production decisions easier.

During the 1930s and 1940s researchers at several agricultural experiment stations across the country studied the factors affecting fruit set in this crop.

One thing they discovered was that fruit set depends on the number of leaves the plant is carrying. "Because the dry matter content of each watermelon is made up largely of carbohydrates, the plant needs a lot of leaves to develop fruit properly," the specialist explains. "Thus, one step toward good yields is to encourage rapid early growth. Of course, there's a danger of applying too much fertilizer and delaying flowering. But, all things being equal, it appears that the plant with the most leaves will set fruit soonest and grow out that fruit best."

In a related study, researchers showed that removing defective melons increased final yield. A growing melon tends to inhibit setting of other female flowers on the vine. This means that if a misshapen fruit is present, setting of a subsequent normal one many be delayed for several weeks.

Another study showed that when the number of melons per plant was limited to two, the greatest returns were realized from the standpoint of earliness and total yield, Kee reports. When fruit production was limited to one melon per plant, the increased size did not compensate for decreased yield. "This doesn't mean that Delmarva growers need to control the number of melons per plant," he says. "But it does indicate how a watermelon vine sets, grows and compensates for developing fruit."

Scientists also found that more fruit is set during cooler weather or during the cooler parts of the day. Temperatures in the high 90s and over 100 degrees F are detrimental to fruit set. "This is somewhat academic because we can't control the weather, but with irrigation and other good growing practices we can help plants cope better with weather extremes," Kee says

A more important factor influencing fruit set is competition for food material. This will affect set and development even more than environmental conditions. "This competition probably exists between fruit and flowers already set," the specialist says. "It's also known that developing melons pull the bulk of their food from the leaves closest to them. This is important in terms of fertility programs and other factors affecting the movement of nutrients within the vine. An obvious example is blossom end rot, or shriveled melons, a condition usually associated with dry soil and calcium deficiency."

Irrigating to maintain even soil moisture will help avoid this problem, as will proper liming to provide calcium in the soil. This nutrient is immobile inside the plant, so it won't move from distant leaves into those closest to developing fruit. A sidedressing of calcium nitrate may be useful to prevent blossom end rot, Kee says. Pruning may also help if large numbers of shriveled melons occur.

For further recommendations on a fertility program for watermelons, he suggests growers consult the 1984 edition of the extension bulletin, "Commercial Vegetable Production Recommendations." Copies are available from county extension offices in Newark (451-2506), Dover (736-1448) and Georgetown (856-5250).

FFA'ers visit Trenton

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — FFA Chapter Presidents and their advisors throughout New Jersey participated in the Chapter Presidents' Tour of Trenton on Feb. 23. This event was part of National FFA Week celebrated by nearly 450,000 FFA members nationwide from Feb. 18-25.

The tour consisted of visits to the Department of Agriculture Laboratories, the Farm Bureau and the State House. Students had the opportunity to speak with entomologists, chemists, seed and animal health specialists while viewing the practices and operations of the staff.

President Walter Ellis of the Farm Bureau and the Secretary of Agriculture, Arthur Brown, discussed issues of New Jersey agriculture with the student leaders.

Gov. Thomas H. Kean met with the group and presented the signed Proclamation to the State FFA President, Steven Gruenberg, and his fellow State Officers. The Governor then answered questions raised by the FFA members.

This opportunity to thur Trenton and meet with state leaders was a unique and educational experience for vocational agriculture and FFA students who are preparing for careers and leadership positions in New Jersey agriculture

Over 25 Years Of Quality Materials & Service

Food Needs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Global demands for food, fiber and forest products will grow dramatically by the end of this century, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Orville G. Bentley has told congressional staffs.

Bentley presented a report called "Needs Assessment for the Food and Agricultural Sciences," which examines the 20- 30-year needs for food, fiber and forest products, and the supporting roles played by research, extension and higher education.

Bentley said the increased demand will require an increasing emphasis on farm profits, food safety and an improvement in the ability to protect America's soil and water resources. "We also must look at the need to adapt agricutlure to satisfy the ever-changing needs of consumers," Bentley noted.

Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block had clled for the "needs assessment study" to comply with provisions of the 1981 Farm Bill. The assessment was done by the Joint Council on Food and Agricultural Sciences, representing the federal, state and private sectors.

Bentley cited recent changes in the agricultural picture that can help create the new technological base farmers will need to meet the challenges ahead, including:

— Biotechnology now provides scientists with the capability to understand and fundamentally alter the processes of living cells.

— Farmers are shifting from animal to plant production. In 1966, cash received for crops was 42 percent of the total receipts by farmers. By 1980, this had increased to 50 percent.

— Advances in computer technology is speeding up the analysis and transfer of information on the "information age."

Bentley said the needs assessment shows that animal agriculture is facing a severe cost/price squeeze.

He said increased production per animal can be achieved through improvements in (1) forage production and utilization; (2) reproduction and genetics; and (3) physiology and nutrition.

Modern agriculture depends heavily on chemicals. The challenge, said Bentley, is to develop chemicals more highly targeted to their beneficial use and cause fewer environmental hazards.

Tobacco auctions open in Md.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Maryland Department of Agriculture's "Tobacco Market Newsline" service began reporting on the 1984 Maryland tobacco auctions on Wednesday, according to Bradley H. Powers, Chief of Marketing Services for MDA.

"The service will consist of a short, taped, telephone report on pounds sold, prices paid, and average price per pound with daily comparisons against last year's sales at the time", Powers said.

The report will be on line by 10 A.M. each weekday during the tobacco market season, which continues to April 26, and can be accessed by calling (301) 841-5763.

The 1983 Maryland tobacco crop being sold this year is estimated to be between 27 and 29 million pounds. Quality of the leaf is reported to vary considerably as the tobacco was produced under the most severe growing conditions experienced here in some 50 years due to drought.

In 1983, some 38 million pounds of tobacco from the 1982 crop were sold (a modern day high production) returning to farmers almost $58 million at an average of $1.51 per pound. In 1982, some 33.2 million pounds of tobacco from the 1981 crop were sold returning to farmers slightly over $58 million at an average of $1.75 per pound.

IVECO DIESEL TRUCKS

COMPARE FUEL ECONOMY

IVECO delivers twice the fuel economy of domestic gas-powered trucks and better M.P.G.'s than V-8 diesels.

COMPARE SERVICE LIFE

IVECO trucks are designed and built like heavy-duty trucks to last 300,000 miles or longer...three times the design life of most domestic trucks.

COMPARE COST OF OWNERSHIP

Better fuel economy. Longer service life. Longer warranty protection. It all adds up to Lower Cost of Ownership over the life of an IVECO Diesel Truck.

LORSBAN* Insecticides stop cutworms... so you only worry about transplanting once.

It costs enough to transplant your tobacco plants once. You don't want to do it a second time because cutworms got started. And if you use LORSBAN* Insecticides at transplanting you won't need to. That's because LORSBAN Insecticides keep destructive tobacco insects like cutworms from ever getting a start in your newly transplanted tobacco.†

Available in liquid or granular. LORSBAN Insecticides come in two formulations to fit your specific application needs. LORSBAN* 15G Granular Insecticide can be blended with your dry fertilizer; or LORSBAN* 4E Liquid can be tank mixed with herbicides and some soil fungicides.

This year, protect your young tobacco and put an end to the extra cost and work of resetting. Use LORSBAN 15G Granular or LORSBAN 4E Liquid Insecticides, and control cutworms before they've had a chance to start. LORSBAN Insecticides . . . where they fit . . . nothing works better.

†See Special Local Need Labeling.

Regardless of the insecticide you choose, ALWAYS READ THE LABEL BEFORE USE AND CAREFULLY FOLLOW ALL LABEL DIRECTIONS AND PRECAUTIONS for safe use.

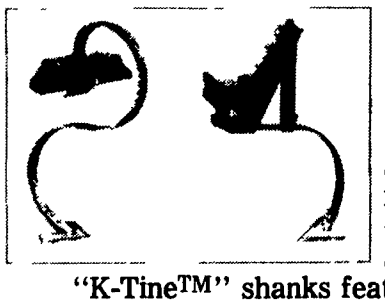
Rigid Models - 13 ft. to 16 ft., Flex Models - 19 ft. to 36 ft.

Preparing a seedbed used to take a lot of time, a lot of fuel, and a lot of money.

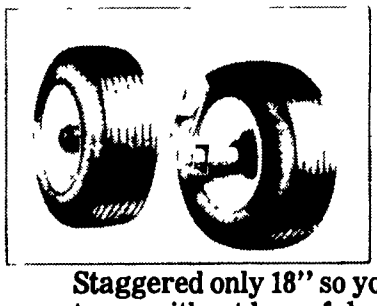
But now there's a smarter way to get the job done — with a Krause Landsman. It's a unique tillage implement that discs, incorporates chemicals (either deep or shallow), cultivates, and finishes all at once — to prepare your seedbeds with just one pass.

Built with heavy-duty features like these:

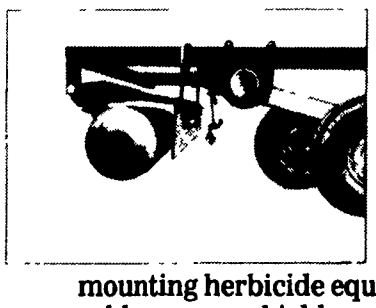


Choice of two cultivator shanks, both offering 25" of clearance under frame... Spring-cushioned shanks have rear-mounted shock and come with 10" sweeps. Heavy-duty "K-Tine™" shanks feature a high point load to keep sweeps level and still provide aggressive mixing action.

Massive hitch is an extra-heavy design, proven on Krause disc harrows. It is spring-cushioned to reduce frame stress on uneven ground — a feature most competitors don't offer. Built from heavy 4"x6" steel tubing.



Walking tandem wheels flex over obstacles individually and follow contour of the land for uniform working depth. Staggered only 18" so you can make tight turns without harmful side loading. Regreaseable bearings.



Wide incorporation area is provided in the 42" space between disc gang and front row of field cultivator shanks. Lots of room for mounting herbicide equipment. Flexible rubber spray shields are optional for high-speed application.

Reserves of corn released

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Corn entered in the farmer-owned reserve from Oct. 6, 1981, through June 30, 1982, (reserve IV) will be in release status through April.

Oat was released from the reserve Dec. 7 and will remain in release status through March.

Milton Hertz, a deputy administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said the decisions on the reserve were made following a review by the department's Commodity Credit Corporation of its average market prices March 1, as reported by USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, adjusted to reflect the market price received by farmers.

On March 1, the national average adjusted price of $3.18 per bushel for corn was 3 cents above its reserve IV release level. The national average adjusted price for oat March 1 was $1.75 per bushel, 10 cents above the commodity's reserve release level.

The selected major markets for corn are Kansas City, Minneapolis, Omaha, and St. Louis. The daily market reviewed by CCC for oat is Minneapolis.

Hertz said the adjustment factors used to determine approximate farm price levels from quoted daily major-market (or terminal) prices on March 1 puts the factors for corn and oat at 1 cent for March, an unusually small adjustment level. For comparison, Hertz said, the February factors were 7 cents for corn and 23 cents for oat.

THINK HAYLAGE.
YOUR HAYLAGE IS TOO VALUABLE TO STUFF IN A PLASTIC BAG!!

As a field wise farmer you have learned to calculate your feed crop harvest to maximize the capture of Total Digestible Nutrients (TDN) which will ultimately result in efficient top production

Your profit rides on it!

So why chance ensiling your valuable crop in a plastic bag? Even temporarily? The truth is that — at best — bags are a gamble

Consider the outrageous expense of filling equipment which cannot be used for any other purpose In addition to the cost of the non reusable bags Oxygen free storage? What about the documented research done at the University of Minnesota showing an average 12% DRY MATTER LOSS during a two year study

After considering the facts we think you ll agree that it's time for a concrete solution Want more information? Write or call us for all the facts you ll be glad you did

Thanks For Your Help At The Farm Show on Deciding Which Pipe To Use.

Response #1
"Don't go back to former pipe that was only half as strong."

Response #2
"Galvanizing inside is as important as outside."

Response #3
"Very little interest in stainless steel because of cost and not as strong."

Let us help in your 1984 building plans and explain our quality.

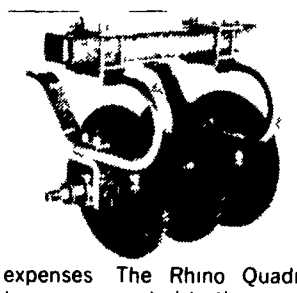
Guaranteed Quadraseal Bearings. The unique Rhino double row tapered roller bearing is guaranteed for two years and provides greater life and dependability than competitive bearings. The Quadraseal double row tapered roller bearings offer more capacity than single row ball bearings.



Spring Bearing Hangers reduce shockloads to the blade, axles, bearings and frame when working in fields with rocks or stumps. The Rhino 1"x2" spring bearing hangers provide maximum strength, add protection, and reduce downtime expenses. The Rhino Quadraseal gang bearings are trunnion mounted to the spring bearing hangers to allow the gangs to flex freely without undue stress being placed on the gang axle.

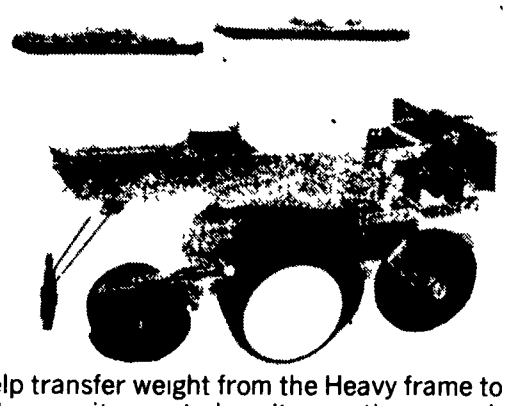
FOR LOW-TILL OR NO-TILL

Save fuel, time, moisture and soil with a Max-Emerge® conservation planter



Here's a rugged planter you can rely on in most soil conditions, including stubble and many sod fields.

Heavy-duty springs help transfer weight from the Heavy frame to each planting unit to keep unit-mounted coulters in the ground. Frame-mounted coulters and cast-iron firming wheels are available, too, for extra-tough conditions.

Whether you no-till, low-till or conventionally till your ground, these 4-row (30 to 40-inch rows), and 6- and 8-row narrow models can help you save fuel, time, moisture and soil. See us soon for details.

A.B.C. GROFF EXCLUSIVE!

VERSATILE 2 ROW MOUNTED MAXI-EMERGE PLANTERS

Planter frame for small and medium-sized farmers is being manufactured and marketed by ABC Groff Inc., of New Holland.

FEATURES

- Infinite Row Spacing From 18" to 42"
- Can Be Used For Conventional Till, Minimum Till Or No-Till
- Can Be Used For Planting Sweet Corn In The Furrow With Special Furrow Openers

Get the latest in self-propelled forage harvester technology with a 225-hp 5720 or 290-hp 5820 Timer-Mizer self-propelled

Their time-saving design starts with the Dura-Drum™ cutterhead 40 segmented knives on a 24-inch-diameter drum These knives tend to slide back and avoid damage if they hit an obstruction

The quick-adjustment stationary knife and built-in knife sharpener let you do needed adjustments in minutes Let us show you all the advantages of Time-Mizer self-propelleds real soon

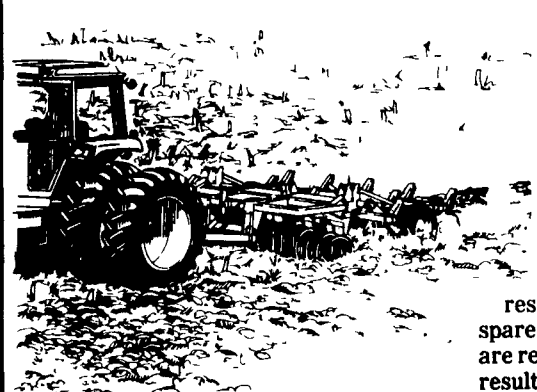
SPECIAL PRICE



Combined tillage saves time, fuel and soil. The curvature of 22-inch sperical blades works with the gang angle to cut heavy trash better than coulters. Heavy-duty 1½x2-inch chisel standards shatter soil and mix residue, with power to spare. And, adjustments are refined for fast, easy results.

LONG'S GLASS-LINED STORAGE SYSTEMS

(1) CORRUGLASS® BINS
Long incorporates the strength of corrugated steel with a protective coating of glass fused to steel to produce the lowest cost glass lined oxygen limiting storage system for high moisture grain. Breather bags and choice of bottom unloader with tapered power driven sweep auger or standard 6" auger unloader with clean out sweep arm complete this system.

(2) OXYGEN LIMITING, GLASS-LINED SILOS
These smooth wall silos with glass fused to steel protective coating are designed for high moisture grain and medium moisture forages. Breather bags and bottom unloader with power driven sweep auger for grain or chain unloader for forage and grain complete this system.

(3) STOR-LIX® LIQUID MANURE STORAGE
Stor-Lix glass lined tanks help preserve the nutrient value of manure, help protect the environment and afford better management of time, labor and equipment.

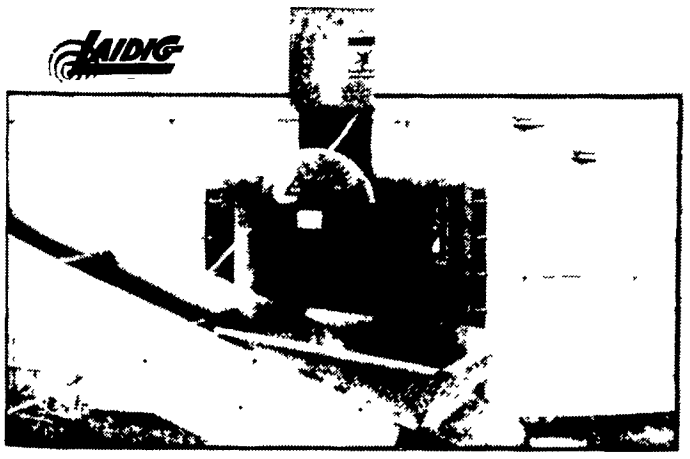
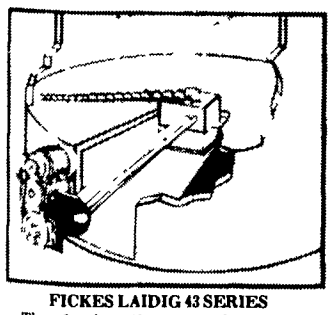
FICKES SILOS...

Dependable-Reliable

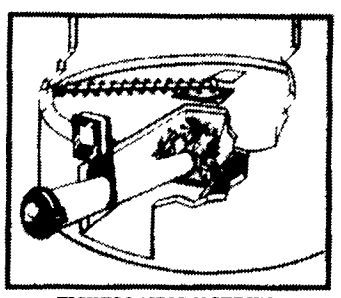
Systems That Assure Continuous Service Day After Day

LAIDIG





FICKES LAIDIG 43 SERIES
The Laidig 43 series for high-moisture grain, can handle any crop you can grow and store Shelled corn, ground ear corn, milo, barley



FICKES LAIDIG 98 SERIES
The Laidig 98 bottom unloader can handle whole corn silage, haylage, alfalfa, mixed crops, shelled corn, ground ear corn, ground grains

IT ALL COMES DOWN TO THE BOTTOM

The unloader is the hardest working part of any storage system It's at the bottom of efficient, trouble-free feeding Laidig the name that has become synonymous with top quality, bottom unloaders, offers two heavy-duty unloaders, both noted for their exceptional dependability

The Laidig 43 series features a "full-time" POW-R-SWEEP auger that forces its way into the mass, and undercuts it every time you feed Tapered fighting moves grain rapidly to the unit's center Here, it drops into the hopper and is carried smoothly by the exit auger outside, to waiting animals

The Laidig 98 series features a ring drive sweep arm that powers its way through hard-packed silage, driven from a track attached to the base of the structure With power applied at the outer end of the arm, there's less stress on the unloader Auger knives loosen material from the impacted mass, and tapered flighting moves silage to the center of the unit where it drops into the hopper

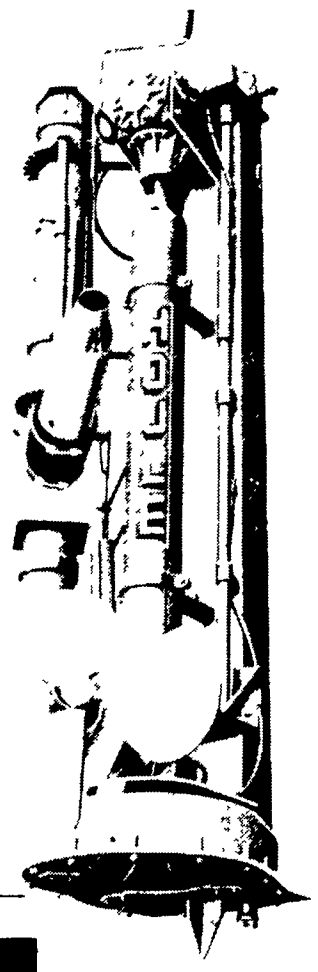
The MANURE PUMP with a BIG BITE

If you are trying to agitate and pump manure without this big propellor and positive cutting blade, you probably aren't doing it as fast as you could.

This big 24" steerable propellor agitates even the hardest of manure storage pits with heavy bedding at displacement rates of 18,000 gallons per minute. The cutting blade will chop long straw bedding and hay from feed bunks to mix it into a rich and creamy fertilizer. This pump is available for all sizes of storage areas in lagoon, trailer, 3-point hitch, and stationary models.



Don't be caught short of enough pump to do the job.

Call us today for more information or a free demonstration.

IS SLICK CONCRETE A PROBLEM ON YOUR FARM?

Now you can rent our re-surfacing equipment to return your concrete to safe and comfortable conditions for your cattle. The equipment produces a 2¼ inch wide band approx. 2¼ inch apart. This preserves enough smooth surface for easy scraping and enough rough surface to give surefootedness for your animals. Greatly aids in heat detection. We offer "at your door service" in a 10 state area. Prices are reasonable. Please call us collect for more details anytime except Sunday. Call (301) 790 1303 collect.

31 years of planned breeding program
31 years of leadership in the swine industry
31 years of winners - SHOW RING - CARCASS - TEST STATION
It is not what we say - It is what the record of proof says.
THE PA SWINE TEST STATION IS 16 YEARS OLD.
OUR 16 years of TESTING at this station in competition with other breeders were good ones.
OUR pigs hold the all-time record for Ham-Loin % for pen average.
OUR pigs hold the all-time record for Loin-Eye Area for pen average.
OUR pigs hold the all-time record for Length of pig.
OUR pigs hold the all-time record for Most Superior Sires Tested.
OUR pigs hold the all-time record for the Most High Indexing Tested boar winners.
OUR records prove more pounds of gain from less feed per day.
THESE RECORDS ARE THE PROOF THAT WE PROFIT ON THE COST END AND ON THE SALES END (DOUBLE PROFIT)

If you can find a better planter, we'd like to see it.

There's a planter sitting on our lot right now that many farmers across the country — and right here in this county — believe to be the most accurate planter on the market today The 5100 Seed Boss® planter from White Farm Equipment Company

Accurate seed depth, even spacing. This planter uses our innovative walking beam dual gauge wheel system to put seeds consistently at the depth you select — even in rough ground or varying soil types And that's especially important in today's reduced tillage seedbeds Plus its gentle seed metering provides accurate seed spacing and population, not only in corn but also in other row-crops like soybeans, milo and cotton

It doesn't cost anything to look.

Drop by our dealership in the next few days and take a look at the Seed Boss We'll point out its advantages Answer any questions you have If you're thinking about a new planter, you owe it to yourself to see the Seed Boss

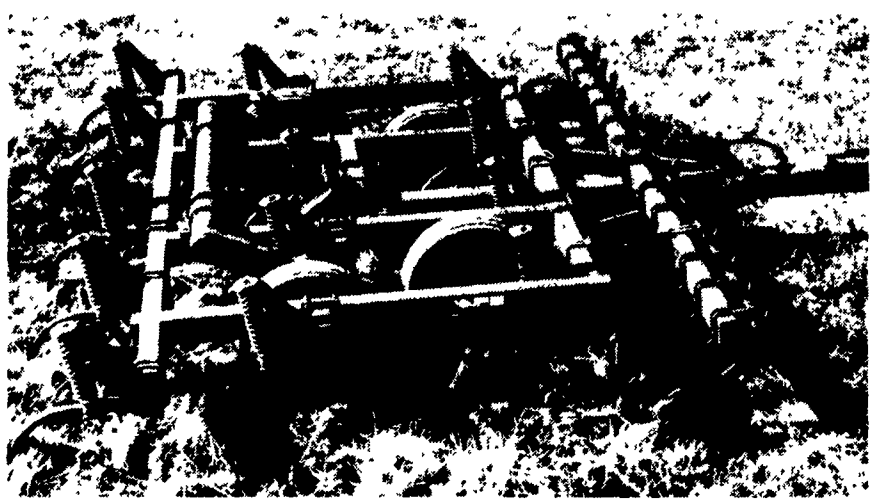
A new twist in conservation tillage tools



The 435 Conservation Chisel Plow isn't just another disc/chisel. Its design offers a unique twist on conservation tillage. Plus flexibility that other disc/chisels don't offer.

Concave discs up front.

The discs are big 22-inch spherical blades, mounted individually on spring cushion arms. The individual disc mounting lets each disc rise out of the ground to clear rocks, instead of the whole gang.

Depth control of the discs is simple, thanks to the hydraulically controlled tool bar.

A chisel shank every 12 inches.

The long, 90-inch frame of the 435 allows three ranks of chisels spaced 12 inches apart, for trash flow freely between and around the chisels. Plus our spring trip clamp assembly lets chisels clear up to an 11-inch obstruction.

Built strong, in the White Farm tradition.

Big 4"x6"x¼" steel box beams add working weight and strength. It's heavier than most weight-filled frames.

WHITE DISKS: INDUSTRY LEADERS

Let us show you the difference in disks.

There's a big difference in disks. And if you've never taken the time to really study what makes one disk more productive than the next, drop into our dealership and let us point out a few facts using models from White Farm Equipment Company.

More weight means better disking. Not a revolutionary thought, but there are ways to spot built-in working weight without putting the implement on a scale. One example is massive box beams of high carbon steel used in all of our disks. More steel means more than durability and rigidity. It adds weight to keep disks in the ground.

Models for every need. Whatever type of disk you need, we've got a model for you. From our massive 281 Offset to the 270 series-flex-wing tandem, to the 250 series semi-flexible frame, to the 264 rigid disk. Each offers specific features and attachments to make tillage easier and faster.

Come in and let us show you the difference in disks. And the difference in White Farm Equipment.

Farm Talk

by Jerry Webb
Delaware Extension

The pork industry has mounted a national effort to convince consumers of the economic and nutritional value of its products. I'm doing my part by passing along some fascinating bits of hog trivia. For instance:

* Per capita pork consumption in the United States is about 70 pounds.
* Americans consume about 800,000 pounds of fresh pork sausage a year.
* They eat about two billion pounds of ham.
* In Iowa, the number one hog state, the average hog farmer produces enough pork for 1,000 people.

I know more about hogs, including the fact that a pig from farrow to market leaves approximately $5.60 worth of fertilizer nutrients in its manure.

Traditionally, pork has had low status among consumers who seem to always prefer beef even if it costs more. But in recent years more and more consumers are using more pork products in their menu planning.

Meanwhile, the hog industry has done a lot to produce a better product. The lean, trim pork products that are displayed in supermarket meat cases these days are a far cry from the pre-World War II hog. There are good reasons for that. Back in those days the typical farm family grew a few hogs and consumed some of them right on the farm. As the old saying goes, they used everything but the oink, and a large overly fat hog produced a variety of home use products including lard for cooking, fatback, cracklings, sow belly, ham, bacon, pickled pigs feet, and pork skin. But times changed and so did consumer preferences, and the demand for land and salt pork plummeted.

And so farmers and researchers and others vitally involved in the swine industry literally redesigned the hog. They made it longer and taller and trimmer, and they eliminated almost all of the heavy backfat covering that used to be part of a pig. Then they came up with new products and new recipes and new merchandising ideas. Now pork is right there in the forefront competing with beef and chicken for the consumer meat dollar and supplying some of the very finest restaurant and home prepared meals.

One good example of that is ground pork — a product that you probably never heard of until the past three or four years. Ground pork was launched a few years ago in Iowa and has been catching on nationwide. It can be used just about anywhere you would use ground beef, and home economists say it's a good source of high quality protein, plus iron, niacin and riboflavin. The industry is producing ground pork that's about 75 to 80 percent lean meat and that makes it comparable to ground chuck. So it's ideal for a lot of home recipes.

National sales of ground pork are increasing as more and more homemakers are hearing about it and finding ways to use it. Most ground pork is produced right at the packing plant from trimmings from the shoulder, loin or belly, since they contain the reddest muscle and are mostly lean. Ground pork is a bit more perishable than ground beef, according to the experts, and its flavor will deteriorate faster after storage in the refrigerator. So it should be stored in the coldest place in the refrigerator where the temperature is as low as possible without actually freezing.

But don't confuse ground pork with sausage. Those are two completely different products. Sausage has been around since before recorded history. It was born of necessity as a means of keeping meat from spoiling since there was no such thing as an icebox. The word sausage actually means salted or preserved meat.

One final historic note on pork. Sausage made from pork played an important part in early history. It seems that Julius Caesar, who died in 44 B.C., used it in his military campaigns. The art of seasoning and preserving sausage had advanced to such a high level that he was able to gain advantages over barbarian armies by issuing pork sausage to his legions. His enemies meanwhile lost precious hours hunting game in the forests or feeding domestic animals. In those days sausage accompanied manifestations of hilarity and joy. So much so that the early church came to associate sausage with heathen behavior. Reformers were actually able to get a prohibition law passed against sausage, so the Romans had to smuggle their treasured meat product past prohibition agents. Finally, the unpopular law was revoked and while Nero fiddled, the Romans ate sausage.

Pork is making some inroads into the fast food industry and when it finally does gain a major share of that market, it will have an important impact on the pork industry. Restaurants and other food serving institutions have avoided pork mostly because of tradition and a problem of what to do with the leftovers. But the upsurge in the fast food business has changed that and the increase in specialty restaurants is providing a new opportunity for pork producers.

So the next time you dine out, why not go whole hog? It's the nutritious, economical and tasty thing to do.

Hardwood available

WEST CHESTER — Good quality hardwood is being sold at Chester County's Springton Manor Farm for $30.00 a cord.

The trees are down and easily accessible to wood cutters, since they have been pulled out and placed along the roadway. Purchasers are allowed one week per cord to cut and haul the wood home. The wood is primarily cherry, ash, and poplar.

Anyone interested in purchasing wood must call the Chester County Parks and Recreation Department at 431-6415 for further information.

Training guides apple tree growth

NEWARK, Del. — Young apple trees are trained, not pruned. "There's a big difference between pruning and training a tree," says University of Delaware extension county agent Derby Walker. "In pruning, you remove the excess and damaged wood. When you train a tree, you're developing its shape and strength."

A year-old apple tree is very simple to prune, Walker says. Try to select five twigs which will become the permanent branches. One upright twig will be the leader. Usually this is about two feet long and should be kept 6 to 10 inches longer than the other four branches, which will become permanent fruit bearing limbs.

These limbs should be spaced around the tree so that none of them overlaps another. When branches overlap, the shade created will affect fruit quality on the lower limb and may eventually kill it, Walker says.

The lowest branch on the tree should be about 30 inches above the ground for easy mowing and access. Usually the other limbs are about 6 inches further up and spaced evenly around the trunk.

The angle at which limbs meet the trunk should be between 60 and 90 degrees. A branch with a narrower crotch may break under a heavy load of fruit. When this happens, as much as 25 percent of the production may be lost.

To increase narrow angles, use a wire, stick or weight to temporarily hold down the limb until the tree has stiffened. This usually takes about a year, after which the spreader can be removed.

Prune a two-year-old apple tree so as to save an additional four limbs around the leader about two feet above the first set. This will give a total of 7 or 8 permanent branches—enough to produce ample fruit if the tree is properly maintained. Again, make sure no branches directly overlap those underneath. And save a central leader which will be cut back about two feet above the second set of limbs. This gives about a 6-foot tree.

As the tree grows, keep in mind a maximum height for it to reach. This could be anywhere from 9 or 10 feet up to 12 or 14, depending on the variety, because some are more vigorous than others. "Once the height is reached, cut off everything that grows higher," Walker says. "After all, you don't want to spend a lot of time climbing up and down ladders in order to pick fruit."

Keeping the tree close to the ground will make it easier to provide the kind of care necessary to produce high quality fruit.

"If you fail to train the tree when it's young," he concludes, "you'll spend the rest of your life pruning it, and have fruit that may be 20 to 30 feet off the ground."

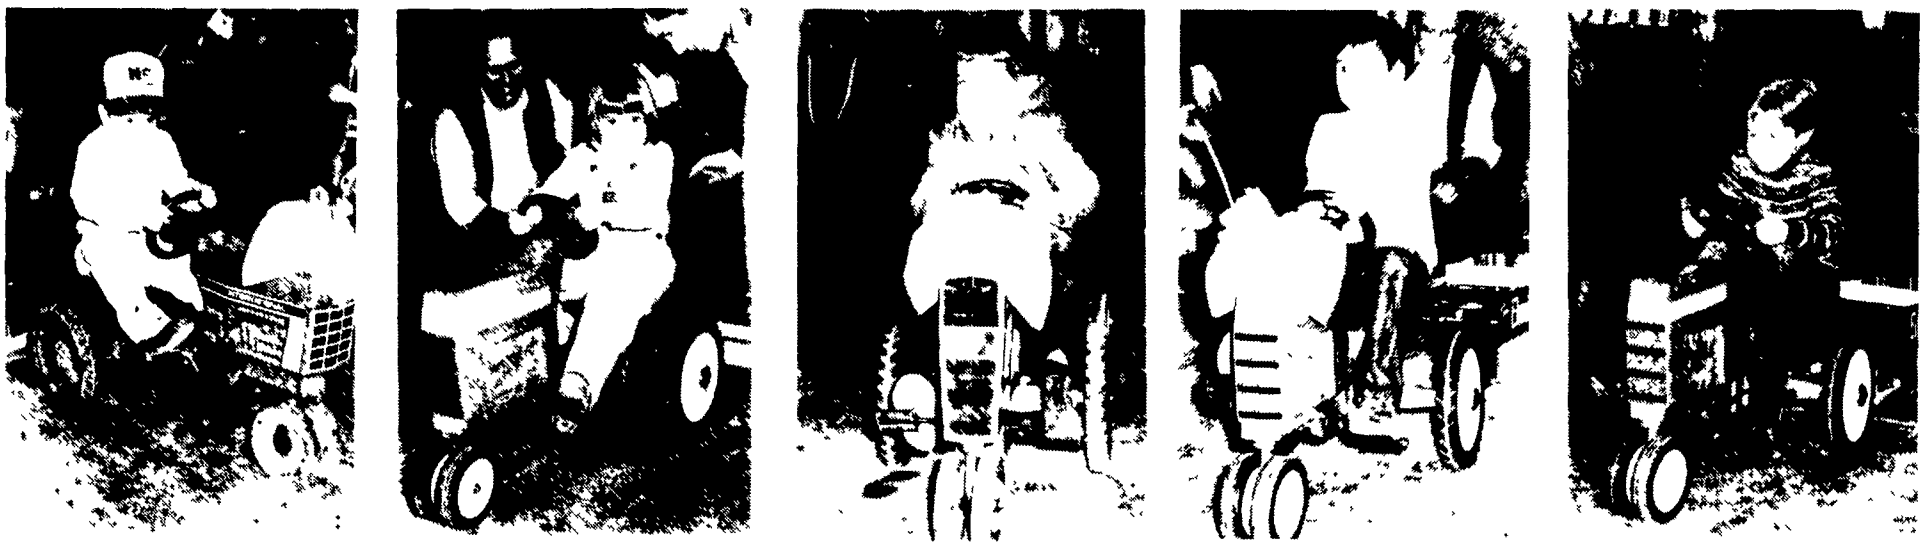
Keller Bros. holds 'pedal pull' competition



Concentration, determination etched on faces of young tractor drivers

BY JACK HUBLEY

BUFFALO SPRINGS — The green flag drops and the Big Blue leaps out of the hole. To the rear of the tractor, a weighted sled lurches forward. Cleverly designed with wheels in the rear and a skid in the front, the sled supports a chain-driven weight platform that transports the weight slowly forward as the rear wheels turn. As the weight shifts from wheels to skid, the sled becomes "heavier."

Twenty feet down the course, the sled's weight takes its toll, and the Ford begins to slow. Seconds later, the tractor and driver strain to a halt, and Michael Houghton of Kirkwood, climbs off his machine to the applause and approval of 500 spectators. Michael Houghton, age five.

Though the drivers and their mounts might be featherweights, there's plenty of heavyweight competition here at the Second Annual Pedal Tractor Pull sponsored by Keller Bros., of Buffalo Springs.

No one seems to miss the smoke and roar of internal combustion engines as saucer-eyed future farmers take their turns at the starting line awaiting the flag. There's quite a range of muscle power here with some managing to drag the authentic, scale model pulling sled to the finish line 40 feet away, and many others lacking the torque. But regardless of where things come to a stop, there's always plenty of support from the gallery.

Entrants are placed in one of four age classes: three to four, five to six, seven to eight, and nine to ten, with the top pullers in each

(Turn to Page D7)

About 500 parents and friends attended Keller Bros.' Pedal Tractor Pull on Friday, March 9.

Lehman's Feed Store expands

BY SUZANNE KEENE

With no room to expand their old feed mill on Harrisburg Street in York Springs, William and Donald Lehman decided to move their feed business to a new and larger location.

In November of 1983, the Lehman brothers opened the doors of Lehman's Feed Store at their new building on State Street and later this month they will celebrate their grand opening.

The additional space in the new store has allowed the Lehman's to expand their business to include a line of home and garden supplies in addition to their Ralston Purina line of feed.

The Lehman family has been in the feed business since 1936 when Paul Lehman opened Lehman's Cash Feed Store. In 1967, William and Donald, who have both been involved in the business since their high school days, bought the business from their father and changed the name to Lehman's Feed Store.

While the majority of the grinding and mixing is still done at the old mill, Donald says he hopes to install a portable diesel mill at their new location sometime this spring. The portable mill will be able to handle their 5,000 tons a year volume while saving them money on their energy bill.

Donald said that as a small feed dealer he can provide more personal service to his customers than larger dealers can.

"If you're dealing with a large concern, you're just a number in their book," he said.

(Turn to Page D7)

personally and meets with them face to face.

The Lehman's also have a farm consultant, Russell Redding, who works five days a week selling dairy feed and formulating feeding programs for customers.

The Lehman's have introduced lawn and garden products to their business. They now offer insecticides, plant foods and sprays and will be selling plants and seeds in the spring, Donald said. They also carry hardware and are working into a general line of building supplies for the home, including concrete and treated lumber.

The business serves about a 25-mile radius that includes York Springs, Fairfield, Gettysburg, Biglerville and East Berlin.

Other family members involved in the business include William's son, Nevin, who drives the bulk truck, and Don's wife, Carolyn, who helps keep the records.

The Lehman's have scheduled their grand opening for Friday, March 23 from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday, March 24 from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Regular store hours are 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 8 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

Cooper gets ABS post

DE FOREST, Wisc. — Raymond L. Cooper has been appointed Representative Supervisor for American Breeders Service in the northeastern states, according to an announcement by Frederick A. Buschner, National Sales Manager for that firm.

Cooper was born and raised on a Registered Holstein dairy farm near DeForest, Wisc. He attended the University of Wisconsin-Madison where he obtained a Bachelor of Science Degree majoring in Dairy Science and Agricultural Economics.

As an undergraduate, he was employed one summer with ABS doing research on the U.S. artificial insemination market. He also served as a sales representative for the Agri-Chemical Division of Ciba-Geigy Corporation prior to his graduation in December, 1983.

While at the University, Cooper won a number of awards and honors including the Dean's Honor List. He was also named the Wisconsin Holstein Association's Distinguished Junior Member. Cooper resides in Ravena, New York.

This year's top two finishers in each class were: age three to four: Hope Liskey and Ryan Hostetter, age five to six: Jeremy Zimmerman and Michael Houghton, age seven to eight: Leonard Horst and Craig Nicarry, and age nine and ten: Willis Weiler and Steven Thomas.

But there are no losers in the K-B tractor pull, and all youngsters with enough pluck to pedal receive a certificate of participation, a key ring, and a candy bar, regardless of the outcome

Staged in conjunction with Keller Bros. Tractor Company's Open House and Customer Appreciation Days, the Pedal Pull was the finale of the two day, March 8 and 9, event.

With over 80 entrants providing a long evening's competition, a bit of half-time diversion was provided by Titus Keller and his chainsaw-powered pedal tractor. Wrapping his frame around the tiny Ford replica, the Keller Bros. service technician managed to skid 223 pounds –along with himself– to the finish line amid the din created by the huffing Homelite engine.

According to Chet Nicarry, the tractor company's General Manager, the pull attracted about 25 percent more entries than last year's showing. With bleachers overflowing, and surrounding floor space at a premium, it looks like the crowd pleasing Pedal Pull at Buffalo Springs may be in danger of outgrowing its "stadium." Maybe next year we'll "see you at the Buck," Keller Bros.

Shattercane problem continues in Pa.

LANCASTER — Corn growers in some Pennsylvania counties may face reduced yields because of increased shattercane infestations in their fields this spring.

In Southeast counties, which produce over 30 percent of the state's corn crop, shattercane has been increasing at an alarming rate. The weed competes with the corn plant for soil nutrients, sunshine and moisture, all essential elements of plant growth.

According to Don Robinson, adult farm instructor at the Eastern Lancaster County School District, shattercane has been in the state for over 10 years.

"Part of the problem is proper weed identification," he admits. "Farmers have been confusing it with johnsongrass, another troublesome sorghum weed and haven't always used the best control."

Shattercane, sometimes called wild cane, was introduced into Pennsylvania as a summer annual forage crop.

"Shattercane can be brought into the state through sorghum-sudangrass hybrids that are contaminated with small amounts of shattercane seed and feed grains that are bought in the Midwest and sold in Pennsyvlania," he says.

The modern corn harvester is also blamed for its more recent spread.

Shattercane seed can emerge from depths as great as six inches in the soil. At the seedling stage, it looks like corn. However, as it grows and reaches a height of three to 12 feet, it becomes very competitive and can drastically reduce corn yields.

Shattercane is extremely tough to control because it can germinate from spring until late in the summer.

"The seedheads usually shatter before the crop is harvested," Robinson says. "Uncontrolled light stands of shattercane develop into heavy infestations rapidly."

With good tillage, shattercane can be under control early in the season. "However, by the end of the summer it may start germinating again," Robison says. "Long lasting control is important."

Robinson, along with fellow adult farmer instructor, Robert Anderson, has researched herbicides for the past four years. "Fo severe infestations, we've found Eradicane Extra herbicide in combination with atrazine or Bladex herbicide provides the best control," Robinson reports. The "Extra" in the product, he explains is an extender that prolongs weed control activity in the soil. Sutan+ herbicide is effective on light to moderate infestations.

Robinson and Anderson recommend a double incorporation of preplant herbicides for shattercane control.

"An important thing farmers must remember is to work the soil only when it is dry," they say. "Wet [illegible]ds to result in a less uniform incorporation."

NEW HOLLAND — The Directors of Penn-Jersey Harvestore Systems, Inc., Howard W. Anderson and Charles R. Enloe, recently announced the corporation will change its name to Penn Jersey Products Inc.

Frank Possessky was named Vice President of Marketing. He is a graduate of Penn State School of Agriculture and an area leader in agribusiness.

Larry Lausch was named Vice President of Operations. Lausch has managed the service department for 18 years, completed yearly A.O.S. Service Management Clinics, and has made outstanding contributions in product performance.

George Watts was named Business Manager. He graduated from Advanced School in Chicago, attended Franklin and Marshall College and Marywood College. He will coordinate the administrative and financial functions of Penn Jersey Products.

"These changes are a sign that Penn Jersey Products Inc. is prepared and will continue to meet the needs of customers as it has for the past 20 years," the directors said.

Purina cites new Bradford dealership

COLUMBIA CROSSROADS — In an effort to offer a broader range of feed products and management services to Bradford County dairymen, Ralston Purina Company has announced preliminary plans to open a new, service-oriented retail dealership in Columbia Crossroads, according to area Purina District Manager Bob Kieselowsky.

Plans to open the new dealership came after Purina's recent market survey of area dairymen, which uncovered a need for a retail feed dealership that would provide not only quality products, but also reliable service and management advice, says Kieselowsky. This type of service is especially important to dairy producers, who form the bulk of prospective customers for the new dealership, he adds.

Besides carrying a full line of livestock feeds and health products, the new dealership will also employ the services of a full time farm consultant. "The farm consultant will visit area producers and help them to customize feeding programs, and give them advice on any livestock management problems they may face," Kieselowsky says.

This emphasis on providing more than just high quality feed products is part of Purina's new industry goal, "to become the premiere company serving American agriculture," as set forth by William "Dub" Jones, president of Purina's Agri Products Group.

"Our goal," Jones declared in a recent interview, "is to stand alongside the farmer with the understanding of what farmers need for productivity and improving profitability. And that gets into feed, animal health care, information services and management services," Jones commented.

Agway holds seminar

Syracuse, NY — Melvin R. Stoltzfus, Lancaster, a farm systems salesman for Agway, attended a three-day marketing and management seminar in mid-February at Carlisle.

The seminar is part of the Agway commitment to ongoing training programs for the farm cooperative's field staff who provide sales and technical consulting services to Northeast farmers.

John Burns, manager of education, planning and development at Agway, conducted many of the classes which emphasized planning and management of time and resources to better serve Agway members and other farm systems clients.

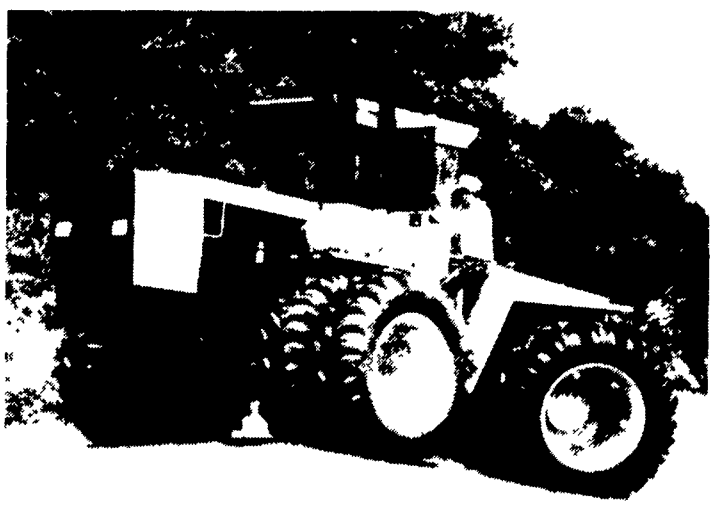
COUGAR IV

One of the world's most efficient farming machines

Once You Own A Four-Wheel-Drive Tractor, The Key To How Profitable It Is Comes Down To THE AMOUNT OF WORK IT DOES, HOW MUCH FUEL IT USES, AND HOW MUCH UPKEEP IT TAKES.

A COUGAR DOES MORE WORK.
The Cougar's large displacement and high torque rise Caterpillar and Cummins engines have consistently given Steiger the extra reserve of pulling power In fact, these 280 horsepower Steigers actually outperform higher horsepower tractors by delivering more of their engine horsepower to the drawbar This high percentage of engine to drawbar horsepower means that with a STEIGER Cougar you get more of the power you re paying for



A COUGAR SAVES FUEL
You pay for a tractor once You pay for fuel everytime you put the nozzle in the tank But Steiger has engineered this four wheel drive to squeeze more power out of every drop of fuel than any other tractor in its class The difference between the fuel efficiency of a Cougar CM 280 and most other tractors can save you enough money each year to buy your family a new TV or refrigerator or other appliance

A COUGAR LASTS

Steiger selects engines, transmissions, and other components from a wide range of sources So while other manufacturers are generally forced to sell only what they build, Steiger can pick from the newest and most efficient technology on the market The components are then carefully engineered into a machine that can consistently outperform and outlast the competition A COUGAR keeps its upkeep to a minimum

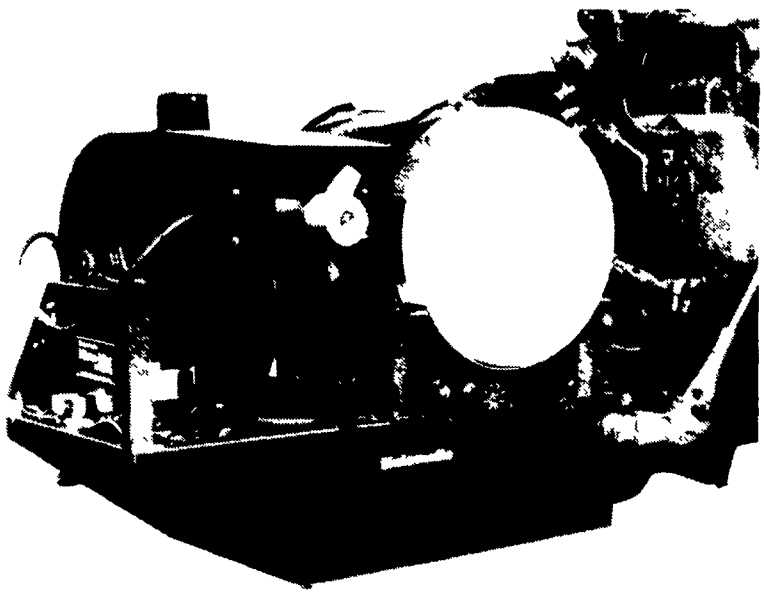
Vegetable sprayer listed

CHAMBERSBURG — Automatic's Micronizer Spray Head and Mist Sprayer are the best combination for vegetable spraying, according to Ryder Supply. The unit offers the advantages of CDA (controlled droplet application) without cumbersome booms or energy-draining electric motors.

The Micronizer is a rotating perforated cylinder which revolves around the nozzle of the Automatic Mist Sprayer. It is powered by a 3-bladed propellor in the air stream. Adjusting the pitch of the propellor blades changes the speed of the cylinder and regulates the size of the droplets. The air stream then deposits the droplets uniformly over a swath of 50-60 feet.

Droplets are produced in a narrow spectrum over the range of sizes. The air blast is an important part of the operation, according to Ryder Supply. It deposits the droplets on the foliage, penetrating the canopy to coat underside of leaves and stems. The Automatic Mist Sprayer with Micronizer Spray head is available in a number of models with pump and tank options.

For futher details contact the manufacturer, Automatic Equipment Mfg. Co., Department NR, Pender, Neb. 68047, 402-385-3054, or the distributor, Ryder Supply, Box 219, Chambersburg, 17201.



Micronizer spray head and mist sprayer from Automatic offers controlled droplet application without use of booms or motors.

Second place was awarded to Jim Stein, Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, for his paper on "Subsurface and Broadcast Phosphorus Effects on Yield and Chemical Composition of Established Alfalfa."

The third place winner was Mary Beth Hall, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, for her paper, "Detection of Epichloe typhina in Tall Fescue Through Microscopic Examination and Plating as Used in Field Survey."

Is soybean inoculation really necessary?

DEKALB, Il. — Inoculating soybean seed with nitrogen fixing bacteria used to be considered cheap insurance for optimum yields. With today's economy, cost conscious farmers are asking if inoculation is really necessary.

Soybean plants get about half of the nitrogen they need from decaying organic material and residual soil nitrogen. The rest comes from the air through symbiotic nitrogen fixation. The term "symbiotic" refers to a mutually beneficial relationship that exists between soybean plants and bacteria called rhizobia. Rhizobia form nodules on soybean roots and derive their energy from carbohydrates produced by the soybean plant. In return the rhizobia fix atmospheric nitrogen into forms that the plant can use. Neither the soybeans nor the rhizobia can fix nitrogen without the other. For this reason, inoculating soybean seed with rhizobia to assure their presence is a common practice.

Rhizobia are host-specific. The species of rhizobia used for soybeans, Rhizobium japonicum, is different from those used for alfalfa or other legume species. Thus, the bacterial inoculums used for various legumes are not interchangeable. There are many strains of Rhizobium japonicum and commercial inoculums are usually a mixture of superior ones.

The use of commercial inoculums has established a tremendous natural population of rhizobia in Corn Belt soils. These naturalized rhizobia are well adapted to existing soil conditions and persist in the soil for a indefinite period, reproducing on organic matter. Research evidence indicates that naturalized rhizobia vary greatly in their ability to fix nitrogen; but they are highly competitive with commercial inoculum strains. Thus, even in fields of commercially inoculated soybeans, most of the nodules formed result from the native soil rhizobia.

While some university research shows no advantage for soybean inoculation there are situations where inoculation may be beneficial. The following guidelines may be helpful:

1. Always inoculate when planting fields where soybeans are being grown for the first time.

2. Inoculate for insurance on fields where soybeans have not been grown in the previous 3 to 5 years. Most research indicates that nodulation is adequate without inoculation for even longer periods.

3. Inoculate on fields where previously grown soybeans were poorly nodulated. A well nodulated plant should have around 100 nodules. The best time to check nodulation is late July and early August. Dig a few plants and count the nodules. Pulling plants will strip some nodules and give a false indication of inadequate nodulation. Effective nodules will be pinkish-red color inside. Long periods of dry weather and high levels of soil nitrogen can reduce the number of nodules, giving the impression that rhizobia population is inadequate.

4. When inoculum is used, it should be applied to the seed immediately ahead of planting. Commercial inoculums supply an insignificant amount of rhizobia compared to the number already in soils and they are extremely sensitive to sunlight, high temperatures and severe drying conditions.

5. Granular implant inoculums, applied in the row through insecticide boxes, supply significantly more viable rhizobia than seed-applied inoculums. However, the cost of these new implant materials is several dollars per acre.

Check your soybeans for proper nodulation. Chances are you can stop worrying about inoculation.

Breeding report available

A new management report on the economic benefits of breeding dairy heifers at the proper age, and the value of striving for a 12-13 month calving interval in lactating dairy cows is now available from The Upjohn Company.

The report explains the importance of getting dairy heifers bred by 15 months and how grouping their breeding with Lutalyse can help accomplish that goal. The report also covers the merit of diagnosing lactating dairy cows with pyometra or silent heat so that they can be treated with Lutalyse and bred to enter the milk string at the appropriate time.

For a single copy of the report, or for more information, write: Lutalyse Management Report 20, The Upjohn Company, P.O. Box 5087, Kalamazoo, MI 49003.

Barbecue raises $5,000

Eastern National Barbeque was a big fund raiser with $5,000 being added to the show's treasury. Over 300 people were served beef, lamb and pork, prepared by Gordon Smith and friends.

The auction of donated items totaled over $4,000. The Angus embryo donated by Rishel Angus and Mar Lee Embryo Transfer Centre sold for $4,100 to RLS Ranch, North Platte, Neb., with one half of the proceeds going to Eastern National. Some 25 items were donated by friends of the Eastern National Livestock Show to help maintain the largest national livestock show in the East. Over 25 judging teams and 2000 head of livestock compete the first week in October.

Dr. Lee Miller, Woodsboro, Md., the newly elected President, reports that as a result of this latest fund raiser and the reorganization of the show, the future of the Eastern National Livestock Show is the brightest it has been for several years with all debts paid off for the year.

ITHACA, N.Y. — Polled Hereford and Hereford breeders from Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Maryland and New York have consignments in the Blue Ribbon Sale and Show March 31.

Doug Stape of Falklands Farm, Schellsburg, Pa. will judge the show at 10 a.m. Champion and reserve champion bulls and females will be named.

Donald Dean of Naples, chairman of the show and sale committee said, "the show has been added to the sale program to increase interest in the breeding stock which will be offered in the sale."

Auctioneer Bill Sheridan of Mason, Mich. will start the sale at 12:30 p.m. Consignors include Double M-B Ranch of Westfield, Mass., Four Corners Farm of Wilton, N.H., West Wind Farm of Lincoln, R.I., JDH Polled Herefords of Dover, Pa., and Huckleberry Hall Farm of Smithville, Md.

He noted some of the top pedigrees represented include Graystone Granite, JC Beau Victor 1 30, Citation, Enforcer, Enticer, Awesome, Joggers Legend and others. "The select group of bulls and the females consinged to this sale meet our sale goal of herd improvement and our quality guidelines to help breeders upgrade their herds," he said.

Working with Dean on the show and sale committee are Ted Kriese of Cato, Robert Generaux of Canadaigua, and Jim Conway of Little Falls.

Catalogs and sale information may be obtained from Donald Dean, P.O. Box 417, Naples, N.Y. 14512 or from Robert Generaux, Rt. 9, 3372 County Rd. 18, Canandaigua, N.Y. 14424.

ITHACA, N.Y. — Going before a television camera can be an exciting and even a nerve-wracking experience, but the 103 registered beef bulls on the current New York Bull Test took the event "in their stride."

Videotapes of the bulls were made at the Cornell University Livestock Teaching and Research Center at Harford as each of the bulls had been weighed at the conclusion of the third 28-day weight period. Each bull was "on camera" for at least 30 seconds.

The television crew, all members of the Cornell animal science staff included Sam Sabin behind the camera and Terry Dockerty on audio. Director of the production was William Greene who moved each bull out in front of the camera. Dockerty identified each bull by number and breed, while Sabin did the videotaping.

The bulls appeared "in the rough" with no makeup or grooming for the occasion. Most went through the process unaware of why they were being given the extra attention but a few took advantage to pose and to ham it up for the camera.

The videotapes have been edited with basic information about each bull, his sire and maternal sire included. Other information about the New York Bull Test and the May 4 Bull Test Sale has been added.

The videotapes are being made available on request to owners of the bulls, breed associations, beef organizations and Cooperative Extension units to promote the performance testing program and the May 4 sale. Such requests are to be made to William Greene, Morrison Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. 14853.

Greene said interested persons who are unable to attend the May 4 sale may wish to view the videotapes and send a bid for a particular bull along with a certified check to his office.

The television approach is one more facet of the public information program conducted by the Bull Test sponsors to promote the use of performance tested bulls in the Northeast. These sponsors include the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association, Cornell University, Cooperative Extension and the State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Weight results for the third period have been announced with the average daily gain for all 103 bulls at 3.33 pounds and the cumulative daily gain since the 140 day test began of 3.42 pounds. Greene said, "these gains indicate the quality of the bulls on the 1984 test."

The one Hereford bull on test led the breed ratings for the "Class of '84" for this third marking period with an average daily gain of 3.86 pounds. The 14 Simmental bulls were second with an average daily gain of 3.70 pounds for the period and the seven Charolais were a close third in breed ranking with 3.69 pounds. Tied for fourth place with an average daily gain of 3.56 pounds were the 32 Polled Herefords and the five Red Angus bulls.

Others in the order of average daily gain of for this third period were the three Shorthorns, 3.50 pounds; the one Salers, 3.43 pounds; the 37 Angus, 2.94 pounds; the one Welsh Black, 2.54 pounds and the two Beefalo, 2.16 pounds.

The top gaining individual bulls for the third weight period and their average daily gain listed in order were: a Simme Valley Ranch of Auburn Simmental bull, 5.18 pounds; an Elm Farm of Richmondville Polled Hereford bull, 5.04 pounds; a Charolais bull owned by Steven Guernsey of Cobleskill, 4.93 pounds; and a Sidehill Farm of Angelica Simmental bull, 4.79 pounds.

Simmental juniors plan Eastern Expo

WESTON, W.Va. — The Eastern Junior Simmental Expo, co-hosted by Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, will be held at Jackson's Mill State 4-H Camp in West Virginia May 31 to June 3.

Jackson's Mill is centrally located in the Eastern Region, and this will enable a number of juniors to participate who might not be able to go to the Midwest Region. Awards will be given in both senior and junior divisions in all categories except the heifer competition.

An overall winner will be chosen according to the point system and will be awarded an 8-inch Simmental bell. The event is open to all AJSA members in the Eastern Region.

Packets with rules and regulations, entry forms and other show information will be sent to each AJSA member in the Eastern Region later this month. Deadline for entries is April 25.

Livestock Ledger

By

Chester D. Hughes

Extension Livestock Specialist

Records must be kept for income taxes, property ownership, registered livestock, and licensed equipment such as cars and trucks. These are required by law. However, it is the optional records such as performance records of beef cattle and crops which can make the most money for you. These optional records provide benchmarks so you can determine where you were and how far you are toward your goals. These optional records give you facts to use in making future decision. No one can remember every detail of past history. Records are necessary if you are to be a successful cattle breeder.

Perhaps you are looking for a new herd sire and have questions as to what information is important and how much you can afford to pay for a bull. One method is to study the information on a performance pedigree and sire summaries. With this method you must learn to understand the meaning of EBV (estimated breeding value) and EPD (expected progeny difference) and how to use these values. They can give you guidelines for continued improvement in your breeding program.

Another method used in evaluating a bull for purchase is to study bull test station results. The important values here are adjusted yearling weight, average daily gain on test, weight per day of age, frame score, fat thickness, loin eye area and scrotal circumference. By studying the ratios associated with these traits you can compare each bull with his test mates.

Bull selection is the single fastest and easiest way to improve productivity in a cow herd. The lowest price paid for a bull is most often not the cheapest bull in the long run. Performance of superior cattle will give you sound information to help you select the right bull to work improvement into your herd. Performance test records are of no value if you don't use them. They are of little value if you don't use them properly. But performance records, when properly evaluated, make your job much easier and the progress that can be achieved is a source of much satisfaction as well as the increased profits.

Looking for a performance tested Bull Sale to attend? Drive up to Penn State University on Friday, March 30 and take part in the bidding of 61 performance tested bulls at 12 noon in Pennsylvania's 11th Performance Tested Bull Sale.

Charolais winners named at Houston

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Interest in Charolais cattle was evident Feb. 23 as cattlemen gathered for the Area I Roll of Excellence Charolais Show at the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo in Houston, Texas. Dr. Don Boggs, University of Georgia, Athens, Ga., judged the 46 females and 34 bulls presented by exhibitors.

Judge Boggs selected his junior champion bull, WC Epic 2083, as grand champion bull. NY Cowbelles join Ag Day observance

LINDLEY, N.Y. — New York State CowBelles are joining in the nationwide observance of Agriculture Day March 20 in a variety of ways, according to Ellen Cisco of Lindley, Agriculture Day chairman.

A major emphasis will be participation in the American National CowBelles Association program "Beef Feeds the Hungry".

CowBelles are being asked to make individual contributions to this program which provides the Salvation Army with certificates for the purchase of beef which are given to needy families. The CowBelles are also seeking contributions to the "Beef Feeds the Hungry" program from local service clubs, farm organizations and church groups.

"This 'Beef Feeds the Hungry' program reaches the grass roots of one of our country's human resource problems and shows that CowBelles are not only women involved in agriculture but are also women who care about helping others," Mrs. Cisco said.

Agriculture Day, the first day of spring, has been observed since 1973 and has been authorized as an official national observance since 1981. Agriculture Day is set aside to focus attention on the 23 million men and women in agriculture from suppliers of goods and services through the food and fiber chain to the retail workers. The 1984 theme is "The Food Chain/A Human Chain."

The CowBelles both on the state and national level have participated in Agriculture Day observances for several years, Mrs. Cisco explained.

She said special Agriculture Day place mats, fact sheets, and other materials have been made available for special events during Agriculture Week March 16-23 such as service club farmer recognition programs. Agriculture Day book marks have been distirbuted to area schools. Special Agriculture Day tapes have been made available to local radio stations and in some regions of the state special newspaper features recognizing local agriculture have been prepared with the assistance of CowBelles.

The Agriculture Day observance is jsut one of the year-long activities of the state women's group. CowBelle president Debbie Mather of Marcellus has named the following committee chairmen for other 1984 activities: Beverly Marland of Cazenovia, "Beef For Father's Day"; Fay Briggs of Deposit, beef cookbook; Margaret Gray of Springwater, Beef Recipe Contest; Judy Swan of Whitney Point, education; Jean Shwartz of Earlville, legislation; Jean Frost of Holcomb, Empire Farm Days; and Eldora Benson of Potsdam, State Fair.

DNA probe aids bovine herpes detection

FORT COLLINS, Co. — A highly technical DNA probe, created only recently for human research, has been adapted to identify bovine herpes, a virus that causes significant losses in the cattle industry.

The adapted probe, developed at Colorado State University, can pinpoint the virus that traditionally has been difficult to identify in tissue samples removed from cattle suspected of being afflicted with bovine herpes.

Once the virus is identified, operators will be able to cull out infected cattle. The virus is believed to play an important role in causing abortions in dairy cows and illnesses and deaths due to respiratory disease in feedlot cattle.

The probe also is expected to help researchers trace the path of the virus through an animal — a process that could aid research on human herpes.

"The probe could show us how the virus moves through an infected cow, whether it infects the reproductive tract and if it remains latent and can be a potential to cause future abortions," said Dr. Carol Blair, CSU microbiologist in charge of the research.

"We think it will help in developing a successful and safe vaccine for cattle. In turn, we hope that can be used as a model for developing a vaccine for human herpes."

The USDA-funded project is a collaboration with CSU researchers Barry Beaty, a microbiologist, and Richard Bowen, a physiologist.

The CSU probe was adapted from a breakthrough made by Dr. David C. Ward, department of Human Genetics, Yale University School of Medicine.

Ward used molecular biology to develop a diagnostic probe that allows scientists to put a non-radioactive label on virus DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid), the raw material of all heredity. Then, researchers can use the labeled DNA to locate and identify viruses in human tissue.

The DNA probe is beneficial because it can find a virus even if tissue is in bad shape. "The virus DNA is frequently protected even if the specimen has deteriorated," Blair explained. "It remains in the nucleus of the cells and is protected from the enzymes that break down the infectious virus in the tissue."

The process of finding foreign DNA has been used for several years, only with radioactive labels. However, because radioactive material was needed, the method has not been commonly used in dianostic labs, especially in the cattle industry. The new non-radioactive method will allow wider use of the method.

"Most diagnostic laboratories haven't been in the position to use radioactive material," Blair said. "They don't have a license to use it, or they can't dispose of the material properly. Or their technicians don't know how to use it. But now a diagnostic lab can take tissue that is in bad shape and test it with the non-radioactive probe."

Blair will discuss the probe and research on bovine and human herpes in a 1 p.m. presentation April 14 at CSU's Veterinary Teaching Hospital as part of the annual open house for the university's College of Veterinary Medicine and Biomedical Sciences.

The bovine herpes research is part of a project that began as a joint effort among researchers here and at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center, Denver.

CSU researchers are trying to develop a vaccine for bovine herpes that also can be used as a model to assist scientists at the Health Sciences Center create a human vaccine.

The research is developing into many questions that researchers have been unable to answer about either human or bovine herpes.

One question is how bovine herpes moves through an animal.

Bovine herpes is believed to enter as an airborne virus through an animal's nasal passages. Then, it moves to sensory nerve ganglia in the head.

From there, speculates the most popular theory, the virus moves in white blood cells to the reproductive tract where it can cause abortions.

There is concern that the virus might remain latent. If this is true, infected bulls used for artificial insemination might be able to pass on infected semen.

"But this hasn't been proven," Blair said. "We're hoping that with the probe we can find out if the virus does move this way and whether it remains latent once in the reproductive tract."

Vaccines have been used in the last two decades to prevent bovine herpes, but the treatments unfortunately are not completely effective, Blair said.

Despite the vaccines, the loss from bovine herpes is millions of dollars a year. "In Colordao, it amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars," Blair added.

As with humans infected with herpes, stress is believed to play an integral role in causing bovine herpes to flare up in cattle, even vaccinated animals.

"When vaccinated cattle are shipped to feedlots, their immunity apparently breaks down from the stress of being moved and crowded together," Blair said. "They often get infected and they don't eat. In a feedlot, it's important that they do eat. That's why they are there.

"So that is an economic loss. But it can be worse. Somehow the virus leaves their respiratory tract open to bacterial pneumonia that frequently will kill the animals."

Ag Day resolution adopted

HARRISBURG — Sen. Edward W. Helfrick (R-27) reports action by the State Senate on a resolution which memorializes the Governor to proclaim March 20 as Pennsylvania Agriculture Day.

Helfrick, who is prime sponsor of the resolution, notes this observance is in conjunction with the national observance of Agriculture Day. The resolution was sent to the House for concurrence. It was adopted by the Senate on Feb. 29.

Senate Resolution 104 recognizes agriculture as Pennsylvania's number one industry, with associated production, processing and marketing segments combining to provide jobs for one-fifth of the Commonwealth's workforce.

"We feel it's vital for all Pennsylvanians to realize agriculture's important role," says Helfrick, who serves as chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee. "Not only do we depend on farmers to provide abundant food and fiber to meet our individual needs for good nutrition and health, this vital industry gives strength to the state and nation by providing the goods demanded by every growing country for the health and well-being of its people. This export market helps to balance our country's foreign trade deficit."

"Since purchasing our Roskamp Roller Mixer we have noted the following changes:

1. Better herd health.
2. Increased Butterfat of .2%, even though we almost eliminated bicarb from our rations.
3. No dust in the feed improved the palatability.
4. Less separation of the feed in our feeding system.

We compared other machines, but were not pleased with the long husks and uneven cob particles. Our Roskamp has more capacity - at times we use a Farmall M tractor and the self-contained hydraulics make it easier to use."

Soybean oil & ethanol have most tractor fuel promise

TROY, Mich. — Ford Motor Company is actively working to develop agricultural tractor engines powered by energy sources other than diesel fuel.

Company engineers, working alone and in conjunction with governments and university research departments throughout the world, have investigated a variety of fuels and engine adaptations.

Among the fuels studied so far are vegetable oils, liquid propane gas, various gaseous fuels and hydrogen, plus alcohols including methanol and ethanol.

According to W. J. Howard, executive engineer for advanced engineering for Ford Tractor Operations (FTO), some of these fuels have already been dropped from consideration as potential power sources.

Few Viable Alternatives

"The gaseous fuels, such as liquid natural gas, compressed natural gas and hydrogen, were ruled out for agricultural tractors because of limited fuel-storage capacity," explains Mr. Howard. "A farmer would need a trailer tied behind his tractor just to carry enough fuel to operate it.

"At this time, liquid propane gas does not appear to be practical either because of unpredictable price fluctuations."

Howard says that most vegetable oils need additional refining to restructure them to meet requirements as a fuel, and at this time do not appear to offer short-term promise. Some interesting results have been discovered using a mixture of soybean oil and diesel fuel, however, and Ford currently is studying soybean-oil mixtures in cooperation with several universities.

Soybean Oil Shows Promise

Last April, FTO supplied a research grant and a three-cylinder diesel tractor engine to the agricultural engineering department of the University of Missouri. Researchers there modified the engine to run successfully on a blend of soybean oil and diesel fuel.

A more ambitious research program is currently taking place at the University of Alabama in Huntsville where researchers at the Johnson Environmental and Energy Center have had excellent results using degummed soybean oil as a diesel-fuel extender.

According to senior research assistant, Joseph F. Peters, in preliminary tests a turbocharged diesel engine achieved maximum and continuous horsepower using a mixture of one-third degummed soybean oil and two-thirds #2 diesel fuel with about the same fuel consumption as with 100 percent diesel fuel.

Currently, the Alabama researchers are using a Ford four-cylinder 256-cubic-inch-displacement turbocharged diesel engine which has been modified for direct injection. Various blends of soybean oil and diesel fuel are being examined and final results should be available by the end of 1983.

Good Supply of Soy Available

Peters says that degummed soybean oil, which is a by-product of soybean meal, can be used as a fuel without further refining, even though it is a little more expensive than plain diesel at today's prices. The soy oil may prove extremely valuable to farmers in the event of a future fuel shortage, particularly during planting and harvest time, when the farmer must be in the field.

There is currently an oversupply of soybean oil in North America, and producers are searching for other uses. Dr. Peters estimates that one season of soybean-oil use as an emergency fuel could eliminate the present glut. However, U.S. farmers alone have an additional billion-gallon potential, since only about one half of the soybeans now grown are used for oil extraction. The widespread use of soybean oil as a fuel also could bring the cost of soybean fuel down.

Alcohol Fuel Promising

The most promising alternate fuel to date is 100 percent ethyl alcohol. Alcohol shows such strong potential that Ford has developed actual prototype tractors fueled

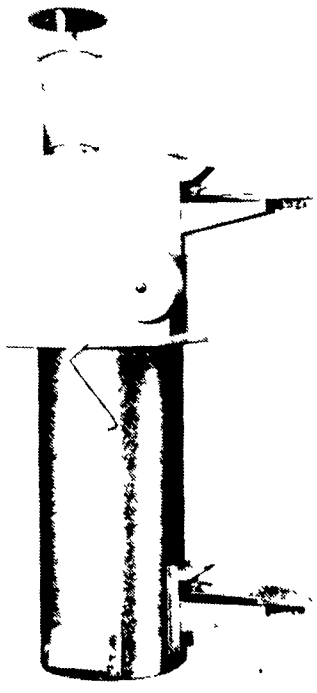
SHENANDOAH INCENERATORS - A SANITARY ALTERNATIVE FOR ON FARM DISPOSAL
To Help Prevent the Spread of Disease
The sanitary way to get rid of animal carcasses is with a Shenandoah incinerator. It's pollution controlled and convenient to use. It's also extra efficient because we've lined the burning chambers, and in some models even the afterburning chambers, with one and a quarter inches of refractory cement. That keeps the heat up and the energy costs down.


Choose among eight easy-to-install smoke and odor controlled models. You even have the option of burning gas or oil.
Ask your local Shenandoah dealer about efficient, inexpensive incinerators. You'll find out how our bright ideas in farm equipment can mean a bright spot in your day. And still leave a green spot in your wallet.

Ten of these alcohol-powered tractors have been field-tested in Brazil for three years, accumulating more than 20,000 hours of operation at Ford and government-run facilities throughout the country. Several units also have been tested in Zimbabwe and in the United States at the University of Nebraska, the University of Iowa and Michigan State University. The alcohol-fueled engines have demonstrated excellent reliability, as well as well as thermal and overall efficiencies equal to those in comparable diesel-powered engines.

New Engine Design

Joe Carter, manager of FTO's engine design department, explains that the major challenge facing Ford in the development of these prototype alcohol-powered tractors was to put together known technologies in the right proportions to allow the engine to use the alcohol, and to use it most efficiently. Materials compatible with alcohol had to be found, as well as a way to optimize efficiency in consuming alcohol.

Ford 3.3-, 4.2- and 4.4-liter engines were developed for Brazil using Ford's basic three-cylinder diesel-engine design. Mr. Carter notes that the lower portion of the engine block in all cases if Ford's standard diesel design except for a larger piston combustion bowl to reduce the compression ratio to 12-to-1.

"We retained standard diesel valve timing, ruggedness and manufacturing tolerances," Mr. Carter says. "The Otto-cycle head is fitted with spark plugs calibrated for the heat range of alcohol, but it is similar to a diesel head otherwise."

Diesel injection equipment is replaced by a governor-controlled updraft carburetor mounted to a water-jacketed manifold. The engine uses an electronic ignition system.

Alcohol is supplied to the carburetor from a tin-plated fuel tank by an electric fuel pump. The carburetor and other fuel-system components use material finishes compatible with 180 to 200 proof ethanol.

Performance is Excellent

The 3.3- and 4.2-liter engines have undergone extensive testing. The 4.4-liter engine was developed especially for use on sugar-cane farms where greater power is needed.

According to Mr. Carter, the results have been excellent, surpassing initial expectations. The alcohol units have performed as well as their diesel counterparts. As for fuel economy, Mr. Carter points out that although the alcohol engines consume approximately 1.5 times the fuel of diesel engines at the same output because of alcohol's lower caloric value, they offer slightly higher thermal efficiency and significantly more power.

Cost Effective Too

Additional testing currently going on at the University of Iowa's College of Engineering is designed to examine not only how well a Ford ethanol tractor performs a variety of farm tasks, but also its cost effectiveness.

According to Paul Peterschmidt, project director of Biomass Research, the Ford test unit successfully completed ten field tasks through harvest using ethanol produced from distressed corn. Dr. Peterschmidt reports this is a fairly inexpensive fuel, which, as a co-product of distillers' grains and solubles, should become even more economical during production.

"We continue to test ethanol-powered tractors and are very excited about their potential," Howard says. "We also continue to be actively involved in a variety of other alternate-fuel research programs."

Snyder observes 44th year

BY SUZANNE KEENE

TAMAQUA — Charles Snyder's grandfather sold five tractor in 1940, the year he founded the Charles S. Snyder, Inc. farm equipment business in Tamaqua, Pa.

Forty-four years later the business volume has noticeably increased. Last year, Charles Snyder sold 51 new tractors and 85 used ones.

Snyder believes his service department and his long business hours are partly responsible for this growth. During the winter months Snyder's is open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m weekdays and from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays. In the summer, Snyder extends his closing time until 9 p.m. on weekdays and 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

The buildings have had to expand to keep up with the growth in sales. "The more equipment you sell, the bigger you have to get." Snyder explained.

He said the business started with a 40-square-foot building. The main building now measures 120 feet by 160 feet and another building was added in 1979.

Snyder credits his success to his adherence to the Golden Rule, or as he says, "just treating people the way you want to be treated."

The Snyder's, who sell Ford and New Holland equipment and Claas combines, deal mainly in new equipment, but they do sell their trade-ins, Snyder said. They also offer full service and a complete line of parts

Snyder employs 20 people full time, including several family members. His wife, Jean, does a lot of the bookwork, with help from sister-in-law Nancy Knadler. Brother-in-law Richard Knadler and father Charles, also lend a hand with the business.

Snyder started working with his father in 1972 and took over the business in 1980.

Instead of vacations, the family spends their free time at tractor pulls, Snyder said. Competing with three Ford tractors in the Superstock class, they have been at the top of the New York competition for the last few years.

Butler Livestock Systems recently honored two area dealers for outstanding participation in the company's marketing programs, special effort and service to customers.

The presentations took place at the firm's International Dealer Meeting recently in Lake Geneva, Wisc. It marked the first combined dealer meeting of the former Jamesway and Oswalt Divisions which merged last August into Butler Livestock Systems.

Bergland to speak Friday

CAMP HILL — Former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland will be the guest speaker at the fourth annual statewide fundraising dinner for FARMER, the political action committee of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA).

The fundraising dinner will be held at the Holiday Inn — Center City, Harrisburg, Friday, starting at 6 p.m. FARMER (Farmers Allied for Responsive More Effective Representation) is a voluntary, bi-partisan organization dedicated to electing and keeping frields of agriculture in the General Assembly.

Bergland, who served as U.S. Agriculture Secretary under President Jimmy Carter, is slated to become the new chief executive officer of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association (NRECA) next month.

A former Minnesota farmer, Bergland became chairman of that state's ASCS in 1961 and moved to Washington D.C. two years later to become Midwest Area Director for ASCS. He was elected to Congress representing his home state's 7th Congressional District in 1970 and served in the U.S. House until he was picked to head USDA in 1977.

During his administration, the Farmer-Owned Grain Reserve was established to help stabilize prices and increase farmers' marketing options. In 1979, Secretary Bergland instituted a major study into changes affecting agriculture since World War II. Known as the "Structure of Agriculture" report, it set an agenda of goals to be pursued in American agriculture in the future.

Prior to his selection for the NRECA post, Bergland had served as President of the Farmland World Trade, a subsidiary of Farmland Industries, the nation's largest farmer-cooperative, headquartered in Kansas City, Mo. In this position he traveled extensively to develop long-term farm markets.

Tickets for the FARMER fundraiser are available from PFA. The cost is $100 per person; $130 including spouse.

PFA is a general, statewide farm organization, representing over 23,000 farm families in 54 county associations.

For further information, contact PFA at (717) 761-2740.

Silage acidity affects dairy feed intake

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — Cattle can sometimes be finicky at feeding time, and one reason may be the acidity of their diets. Researchers at the University of Maryland have found that animals eat better when their corn silage rations are slightly acidic – between pH 5 and 6. At pH levels above and below this range, feed intake is reduced, the researchers say.

The study also indicates that adding sodium bicarbonate to silage at feeding time improves feed intake and cattle performance.

Randy Shaver, doctoral candidate at the University of Wisconsin, conducted the research while a graduate student at Maryland. He compared consumption of 330-lb. Holstein steers fed one of four rations: 1) fresh whole plant corn, 2) fresh whole plant corn acidified with hydrochloric acid to a pH equalling that of corn silage, 3) corn silage, and 4) corn silage with approximately 5 percent sodium bicarbonate (dry matter basis) added at feeding time to increase pH to a level equalling that of fresh whole plant corn.

Feed intake appeared to be linked to pH of the feedstuffs. The highest consumption rate was with corn silage that had been supplemented with sodium bicarb. Consumption was lowest with fresh whole corn which had been acidified (see following table).

Effect of Silage pH on Consumption (Holstein Steers)

Ration	pH	Dry Matter Intake (Lbs/Day)
Fresh whole plant corn	5.20	8.95
Fresh whole plant corn acidified with HCL	3.66	8.31
Corn silage	3.86	8.60
Corn silage supplemented with sodium bicarbonate	5.94	10.10

In a second study, the researchers compared intake of 640-lb. Holstein heifers fed corn silage to which had been added either 2, 4 or 6 percent sodium bicarbonate, on a dry matter basis. A control group received silage which had no bicarb added.

Again, consumption improved as pH approached neutral. However, at the highest level of bicarb, pH of the silage was slightly alkaline, and intake was reduced (see following table).

Effect of Silage pH on Consumption (Holstein Heifers)

Ration	pH	Dry Matter Intake (Lbs/Day)
Control (no bicarb)	3.72	14.74
2% sodium bicarbonate	4.46	17.16
4% sodium bicarbonate	5.62	17.82
6% sodium bicarbonate	8.05	13.64

"This research shows that corn silage pH is a factor affecting intake, and that sodium bicarbonate added to the ration can be beneficial in keeping silage pH within an optimum range of 5 or 6," says Shaver. "Where silage acidity is extremely high, however, it may not be economical to add as much bicarb as would be needed to achieve the optimum pH level. Producers will have to analyze their own situations to see if it pays to reduce silage acidity by adding bicarb at feeding time."

The study is one of several planned at the University of Maryland to further define the role of sodium bicarbonate in cattle feeding, according to Richard Erdman, assistant professor of animal science who participated in the research.

"Many studies have shown a response to sodium bicarbonate, and we have assumed that buffering in the rumen has been the reason for the response," says Erdman. "We're interested in the possibility that bicarb may also improve palatability by keeping pH of the ration at an optimum level."

DVC wins flower award

DOYLESTOWN — Delaware Valley College's display at the Philadelphia Flower Show has been named the 1984 winner of the Bulkley Medal.

"We're delighted with the award," said John Martin, Chairman of the College's Ornamental Horticulture Department. "It really is a great honor. We haven't won the Bulkley Medal in a number of years. The award is national in scope, so it goes beyond being a local honor."

The Bulkley Medal is awarded to an exhibit of special merit and/or educational value. It is sponsored by the Garden Club of America.

The College's theme at this year's show is "The Great American Mail-Order Garden". It lets people see for themselves what over 100 mail-order vegetables and flowers look like and how they stack up against the photos that appear on seed packets and in catalogs.

As part of the project, students at Delaware Valley College compiled a mail-order source list which describes what can be obtained through the mail. Current samples from about 500 companies dealing in mail-order seeds are also part of the display long with a variety of gardening gadgets and tools.

"I was very pleased with some of the comments I heard from the judges who looked at our exhibit," commented Martin. "For the most part they said that our exhibit was attractive as well as educational."

The Philadelphia Flower Show is being held at the Civic Center through Sunday.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Hey out there in reader world! Are you still bearing with me even after I have probably stomped all over your toes? If you are then thank you. One thing that may be of small comfort. Many of the errors in cost cutting that I point out have been ones I have made. After this confession let us proceed with some more ways to improve the cost-return ratio.

Forage testing is a very useful tool. As with soil tests, I can not figure out how any dairyman can operate without it. Evidently a lot of dairymen are subconsciously tired of milking cows and are doing their best to put themselves out of business. It is too bad that those who don't like cows and the dairy business don't just sell out and make room for those who are serious about succeeding in the business.

Forage testing can tell a farmer what he has. From there a feed program can balance what he has with what the cow needs. But don't stop there - go on and use that forage test for the many additional functions it can perform.

1. Check on quality - how well did you do last year in producing home raised feed? Can the excuses - I've hear them all.

2. Gives an idea on how and where you can reduce the more expensive feed you are providing your cows.

a. Can you reduce grain feed intake to 1 to 5 or 1 to 6 for cows after 120 days? If so will those lower producing cows need additional protein?

b. Are you over feeding protein to high producers, to low producers, to all cows?

c. Is ear corn plus soybean meal less expensive than buying hay? Could you cut cows from 2.5% of body weight in hay equivalent to 2% if it is?

d. How much milk are you selling per pound of actual grain fed (should be in excess of 2)? Now don't look at your DHIA book to answer this because you really didn't know how much you fed when you told the tester anyway.

3. Tells you if you have room to play: did you know that the quality of your forage can effect the digestibility of the rest of the feed your cows eat? You often wondered why cows seemed to do better on that real good stuff didn't you?

Exotic feed programs are expensive. You may not need that $1000 per ton miracle ingredient (probably don't in fact). There is nothing that can replace quality forage. You can partially offset low quality forage with a balancing grain feed. Perhaps as a way of cutting costs you should look into your feed ration ingredients. Ask the questions (1) why is this in here, (2) can I replace it with a more economical feed, (3) do I really want to reduce feed costs?

Ag Advice

Since most of this column has been aimed at Dairymen and I have made a couple of snide comments on DHIA, here are my thoughts on that program. DHIA and OS are two extremely useful management tools for dairymen. The unfortunate thing is that many dairymen do not use this valuable tool as an aid in decision making. It is used as a sales tool (which is good), as a brag item (bad), as a social topic (neither), as a data gathering tool for statistics, bull proofs, breed standards, and written material. but too often it is not used as a management tool. It could show you (1) how much to feed - if your records are real, (2) when to breed - or not breed cows, (3) when to cull - let's quit that 2nd and 3rd chance, (4) where your weak months fall, (5) excessive dry periods, (6) perennial problem cows - cow families, (7) where you goofed (it is your fault when a whole group of heifers are poor), (8) when you could cut grain feed. Yes DHIA is a much more useful program than most Pennsylvania dairymen are willing to admit. All dairymen should use it.

Top N.J. corn grower outlines program

FLEMINGTON, N.J. — National Corn Grower Association (NCGA) yield winners are setting good examples for the balance of corn producers in New Jersey, reporting yields consistently 78 to 80 bushels per acre over state averages.

In 1982, the average yield of the top three finishers in the Garden State's non-irrigated division of the NCGA contest was 198.3 bushels per acre, while the average in the no-till division was 164.27 bushels per acre. The state's overall average yield for the same year was 102 bushels per acre, the best ever but still short of the NCGA averages by over 60 bushels. As a result of the drought, average NCGA contest yields were down over 20 bushels per acre in 1983 and statewide corn production averages followed suit.

For the majority of the NCGA entrants, raising corn is one way to supplement their dairying business, and each employs different production methods in search of a program right for them. They all agree, however, that there's no secret to producing high yields. It's just a matter of fine-tuning each cropping practice to best meet individual needs.

First-time NCGA entrant Thomas Kanach, of Flemington, N.J. placed second in the 1982 non-irrigated division with a 195.70 bushel per acre yield. On his second try in 1983, Kanach captured first place in the contest with a yield of 182.29 bushels per acre in spite of severe drought. Kanach, who milks 100 cows and farms 600 acres with his two sons, says most of his cropping is done to help support his dairy.

Although the corn produced on his 300 acres is consumed by his dairy herd either in the form of silage or grain, high yields are just as important to him as if he were to market the grain as a cash crop.

According to Kanach, higher corn yields do make a difference in feed costs. "The better the yield, the less it costs to feed the cows. And better yields are well within the grasp of any farmer willing to invest time and effort in a total crop management program," he emphasizes.

Having farmed for 25 years, Kanach says it's important to keep soil fertility at the proper levels in order to maximize production. Soil tests are taken every year on his farm.

"We fertilize to meet the capability of the field," Kanach explains. His 1982 contest plot, for example, received two tons of lime in 1981.

Later, he applied 190 pounds of nitrogen, 120 pounds of potash and 120 pounds of potassium. Fertilizing for maximum production is the common practice among NCGA winners. Kanach's use of a chisel plow instead of a moldboard plow also is indicative of the state and national trend toward conservation tillage.

May-planted corn was another point of agreement for all but one of the 1982 NCGA winners. However, plant populations ranged from 19,000-28,000, which proves that high seed rates aren't always the key to maximum yields.

More than a third of the farmers, including Kanach, planted DeKalb XL71. Other varieties included Northrup King's PX83, PX76, PX87, and PX74, Custom Feed Seed 4000, DeKalb XL61 and Pioneer 3382.

Three-fourths of the farmers planted in 30-inch rows, as did Kanach. More than half of the farmers used Furadan as their insecticide, which indicates their concern over increased insect problems in fields not moldboard plowed.

Just as important as fertilizing for high yields is controlling weeds so crop performance isn't hampered. More than three-fourths of the 1982 NCGA winners depended on Lasso herbicide for weed control.

The three winners in the non-irrigated division — Rustin Farms of Trenton, Kanach and Sam Santini of Stewartsville — all used a Lasso plus atrazine tank mix.

"We like the control Lasso gives," explains Kanach. He used 2½ quarts of Lasso and 1½ pounds of atrazine to successfully control his main weed problems of foxtail and fall panicum on his corn acreage. "We've had good luck with it, so why change?" he adds.

Gary Donaldson of Hackettstown and Rovin Acres of Crosswicks, first- and third-place finishers in the no-till division, applied a Lasso plus atrazine tank mix as well. Paraquat was the growers' choice as a burndown.

Cropping strategies do vary among NCGA contestants, but all agree a thorough management program geared to maximize production is an essential ingredient in their success.

Machinery still heads farm accidents

LANCASTER — Part-time safety in any phase of the farm operation invites personal loss and often tragedy. No loss compares with the farm accident which costs the life of a family member. Less tragic, but extremely serious, is loss of an arm or leg, or of health. Crop loss can't compare, as those who have suffered a serious accident can attest.

Common sense is revered by the safety conscious. Most — except some who have experienced tragedy — profess to employ this trait in giant doses. Yet farm accident statistics remain shockingly high, a conclusion based on a just — completed Du Pont Agrichemicals study which reports safety data on 1,216 farm operations. Du Pont findings belie the simple expedient of using only common sense.

Common sense is basic, but safety specialists believe more caution is needed. Preparation, or getting ready for the task at hand, is a priority. For the professional athlete, preparation begins well before the competition. Then comes concentration. No athlete performs well without both. Full-time farm safety requires the same kind of dedication.

The Du Pont study indicates progress is being made, especially in using crop protection chemicals. Chemical mishaps accounted for only 6.8 percent of all farm accidents. Jim Borel, of Du Pont, believes this is encouraging. "We are finding that the emphasis in recent years on how to use farm chemicals safety is making users aware of the need of prepare and follow with care when mixing and applying."

Borel believes that the farm operator and any family member or employee who know the label have taken the first step in safe use. Preparation is next: having a container of 5 to 10 gallons of water for immediate washing in case of contact with a wearing chemical; wearing clothing which fully covers the body, and wearing goggles and gloves, and, at times, a respirator. Then, Borel says, comes the time for concentration — unhurried mixing and pouring to avoid spills and splashes. Such measures help assure safe use of the chemicals necessary for cost effective crop yields.

In the study, Borel says that only half, or 50.4 percent, of farm operations reported that they always wear gloves when handling chemicals. A need, often as important, is goggles. Less than 20 percent reported always wearing goggles. Half said they sometimes wear goggles while handling chemicals. And less than one in 20 reported using respirators for the most toxic materials. These accessories are relatively inexpensive and Borel believes that family welfare and safety demand greater attention to these precautions.

Less than 40 percent of the more than 1,200 reporting farm operators knew or had their own state Poison Information Center telephone number posted by the telephone. Only 12.8 percent reported storing chemicals in a special, locked storage building.

More farm operators, Borel believes, are checking the label for word signals which define the degree of potential hazard. "These range from 'Danger' for Group 1 chemicals, to 'Warning' for less toxic compounds, to 'Caution' for the least hazardous." For example "Lexone" 4L carries the "Caution" label as a liquid formulation. However, in the dry flowable formulation, "Lexone" DF, the "Warning" signal is used. In any case, all chemicals, he stresses, are toxic and require common sense plus preparation and observing careful handling procedures.

Few farms, the survey showed, contain adequate shop safety features and safeguards. Just more than one-third of the farm operators reporting, 35.9 percent, believe they have adequate farm shops insofar as safety is concerned.

The Du Pont survey pinpoints farm machinery as the major area needing improvement. A total of 44.8 percent of the lost-time accidents and deaths were machinery related. Falls accounted for half as many accidents

Farm accidents

After losses from machinery and falls, there is a lesser loss — 8.4 percent — related to livestock. Some 6 percent were automotive related. A broad category including all other types of farm accidents accounted for 12 percent.

Although automotive accidents were the lowest reported in the study, many farm operators ignore the protection offered by seat belts. Almost half, 46.1 percent, reported they are never used; about half say they use them "sometimes." Only 4.8 percent, or about one in 20 said they always use a seat belt when driving a car or pickup.

Attempts to keep the family members alerted to fire proved gratifying in the Du Pont study. Almost 80 percent of the farm homes studied had smoke detectors. Some 45 percent had a fire extinguisher in the barn. More striking was the statistic showing that 80 percent of farm combines are equipped with a fire extinguisher.

Finally, the most tragic finding reported was that 17.5 percent of the farm operators said that either a family member or close neighbor had been injured or died in a farm accident within the past two years. In the case of lost-time accidents, the percentage was 74.7, almost three of every four reporting.

Livestock centennial scheduled

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block has invited producer and professional groups associated with the livestock industry to join with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in observing "100 years of animal health" during 1984.

"On May 29, 1884, the U.S. Congress created the Bureau of Animal Industry within USDA," Block said. "The bureau's job was to protect export markets [illegible] U.S. livestock industry, to keep out foreign animal diseases and to work with farmers and ranchers to combat serious animal diseases."

Block said the centennial will be observed throughout 1984. A USDA ceremony will mark the anniversary on May 29. The department has designed a special logo and prepared a visual presentation for observances. The 1984 yearbook of agriculture will be devoted to livestock and pet health.

"Today in America we have the healthiest livestock and the most abundant food supply in the world," Block said.

In 1953, the bureau was split into several separate groups. Research and regulatory functions are now carried out by USDA's Agricultural Research Service and the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. Meat and poultry inspection is done by the Food Safety and Inspection Service. The Packers and Stockyards Administration regulates livestock marketing.

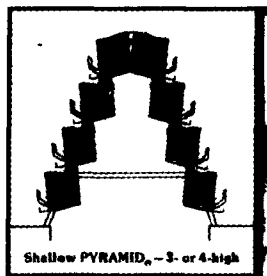
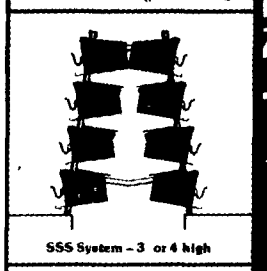
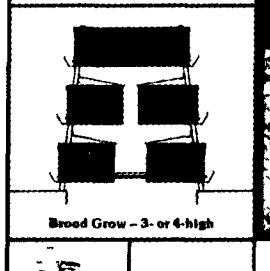
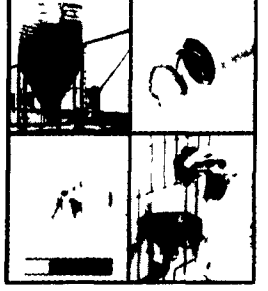
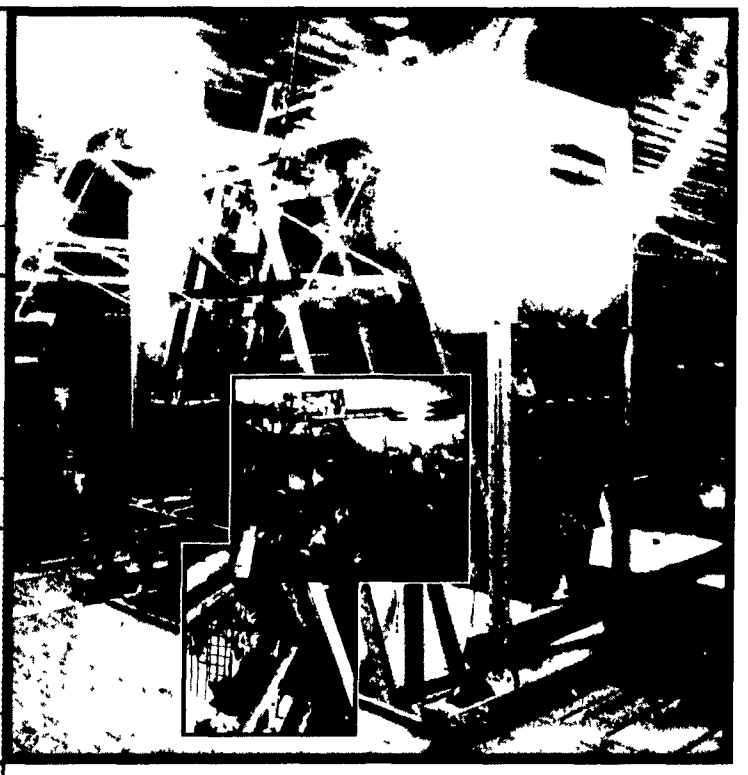
Fast track to egg cost reduction











Chore Time's MEALMASTER FeedKar traveling feeder can help you get your egg costs on track. Here's how:

1 The typical chain feeder uses 1½ hp to feed each cage tier – 6 hp for a 4 high. Our hopper system traveling on tracks is pulled by a cable using only ¼ hp – a 95% energy reduction!

2 Cuts feeder maintenance and labor costs to virtually "zero." You know what a chain feeder costs to maintain!

3 Evens out egg production from one end of the row to the other – birds at the front can't "highgrade" the feed.

We'd like to talk to you about the other ways the nearly 200 feeders we've sold are helping owners. Our FeedKar is now standard on all Chore Time brood, grow and layer cages, our famous shallow PYRAMID® and new deep PYRAMID, our 3 and 4 high SSS.

Find out more about the FeedKar – plus our line of cage systems and the Chore Time "total package" of feed bins, auger ventilation and waterers.

Johnsongrass, salt concerns expressed in Chester

WEST CHESTER — Directors of the Chester/Delaware Farmers' Association heard final details of their spring meeting, set for March 29, and considered requests for help in controlling Johnsongrass and salt run-off from highways at their monthly meeting in Downingtown last week.

Denise Wilkinson, Landenberg, Women's Committee Chairman, said that planning for the spring meeting is complete. It will be held at the West Fallowfield Christian School, Cochranville. "The business meeting will include committee and legislative reports, voting on dues increase and any other pertinent business to come before the members," Wilkinson said. County Commissioners and County Legislators have been invited. Entertainment will be by the Troubadours, a Country and Gospel singing group of Elverson. Reservations can be made by sending $6.50 per person to Willa Mast, R2, Box 420, Parkesburg, 19365. (phone: 857-9216) "It is essential that these reservations be sent in immediately," Wilkinson said.

Lewis Wilkinson, Landenberg, told Directors that Johnsongrass, a noxious weed, is taking over corn fields and soybean fields in Chester County. "The State of Delaware has a toll free number to report Johnsongrass infestations along state highways. In response to that phone call, the State will send out someone to spot spray that section with herbicides", Wilkinson said. He recommended that the Directors request PennDOT to set up a similar program in Pennsylvania.

Wilkinson indicated that this scattering of Johnsongrass seed is moving north from the south. "Geese carrying the seed would be one method of distribution. Truckers carrying hay or other vegetative materials may have Johnsongrass that could be scattered." Wilkinson emphasized that "farmers could help by spot spraying any isolated areas of Johnsongrass with herbicides in their area."

Wilkinson was also disturbed by the run-off of de-icing salt from highways. "Excessive salting of highways runs off into drainage waterways. The salt kills the grass, the wheat, whatever vegetation is growing. The rapidly flowing water then cuts gullies across farmers fields. Farmers are being blamed unfairly for soil erosion and resulting sediment accumulation in streams and Chesapeake Bay," Wilkinson explained.

Wilkinson admitted that de-icing is important for winter travel. He suggested that "PennDOT consider a higher proportion of anti-skid material in the application. Also the use of more efficient spreaders to efficiently apply the material." He also pointed out that many salt storage piles are not under permanent cover. Directors suggested that Wilkinson's concerns he turned over to the Local Affairs Committee for the Farmers' Association.

In other reports, Board members were told that 24 4-H members attended a one-day session to learn the principles of Cooperatives. The conference was sponsored by the Chester-Delaware Cooperative Council.

Tom Merroth, Guthriesville, Membership Chairman, said that there are now 683 members signed up for this year. Directors made plans to complete the membership drive by April 1.

Don Missimer, Regional Field Director, said that the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association Building Fund is 28% complete. He invited all Farmers' Association members to visit the new addition when it opens on March 27.

Johnsongrass has been cited by county ...on agents in Pennsylvania as one of the greatest ... threats in corn, particularly in the southeastern ... of the Commonwealth.

Lamb grading changed

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has proposed changes in U.S. standards for grades of slaughter lamb, yearling and sheep.

Thomas H. Porter, of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the proposed changes would align the slaughter standards with recently-revised standards for lamb, yearling mutton and mutton carcasses.

The carcass standards were changed to allow carcasses with only one break joint – in a young lamb, the point where the foot is removed during slaughter -- to be classed as lamb if other maturity characteristics are typical of lamb. Also, feathering – streaks of fat between the ribs – was dropped as a quality factor. The quality grade now is based on flank fat streaking – fat within or on the flank muscle – in relations to maturity, with a minimum of firmness specified for each grade.

Porter said the proposal for slaughter animals will standardize the quality and conformation compensations, add descriptions of degrees of muscling associated with each grade and drop the cull grade for slaughter lambs and yearlings.

The proposal is not expected to affect the number of lambs in the prime, choice and good grades, he said.

Senate group reports farm program changes

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Senate Agricultural Committee has ordered reported to the Senate legislation to improve the basic farm programs, provide additional export and drought assistance, and reduce the cost to the taxpayers of the farm commodity programs.

The bill makes changes in the wheat program for 1984 and 1985, freezes the target price in 1985 at the 1984 level for feed grains, cotton, and rice, and requires an additional $250 million to be used for direct economic emergency disaster loans in fiscal year 1984. Administration officials, as part of the agreement, also agreed to seek additional funding for P.L. 480 and GSM-5 export funds. The total package will save $3.2 billion over four years.

The bill makes the following changes in law:

Wheat

— Provides for a target price of $4.38 per bushel in 1984 and 1985, instead of the $4.45 and $4.65 called for in current law.

— For the 1984 and 1985 crops, provides for a 10 percent paid diversion with 50 percent of the payment to be made at the time of signup and a payment rate of $2.70 per bushel.

— For both crop years, provides for a 20 percent acreage reduction program with no payment.

— Provides for a 10 to 20 percent payment-in-kind diversion program for the 1984 crop with compensation based on 85 percent of the farm program yield.

Feed Grains

— Freezes the target price for corn at $3.03 per bushel for the 1985 program, instead of the $3.18 in current law.

— For the 1985 crop, provides that if feed grain carry-over on October 1, 1984, exceeds 1.1 billion bushels, the Secretary shall provide for a total acreage cutback of 5 to 20 percent, through a combination acreage reduction program (ARP) and a paid diversion. Not less than 5 percent of the acreage cutback would be achieved through a paid diversion and any reduction over 15 percent would be equally divided between paid diversion and ARP.

— Provides for 50 percent of the diversion payment to be made at the time of signup and for a payment rate of $1.50 per bushel.

Haying and Grazing

— The bill permits haying and grazing of acreage diverted from production under the 1984 wheat program at the option of each State. It authorizes the Secretary to permit haying and grazing of diverted acres under the 1985 wheat program, but permits each State to decided whether to permit haying and grazing in the State if it is authorized by the Secretary.

Emergency Assistance

— The bill requires the Secretary to make Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) natural disaster emergency loans available based on individual production loss for producers whose operations are located in counties contiguous to counties that have been designated as eligible for disaster assistance.

— It also permits natural disaster emergency loan applications to be filed within 8 months of the disaster or the disaster declaration. It permits the valuation of farm assets to be used as collateral for emergency loans to be based on the value of those assets one year before the date of the disaster declaration if that value is higher than the current value.

— Regarding funds for the economic emergency loan program during fiscal year 1984, it requires at least $310 million be made available for insured economic emergency loans, and gives the Secretary additional discretion to make additional amounts available in order to achieve the goals of the program.

— Raises the loan limit on insured operating loans to farmers from $100,000 to $200,000, and guaranteed loans from $200,000 to $400,000.

— Provides additional authorities to FmHA in order to give borrowers who refinance loans better rates and terms.

— Ensures that at least 20 percent of the farm ownership and annual operating loans go to farmers who most need this assistance, and provides loans at subsidized interest rates.

Nation's dairy leaders to attend UDIA's annual meeting

TOWSON, Md. — More than 500 dairy leaders will attend the 14th annual meeting of the United Dairy Industry Association (UDIA), March 30-31, in San Antonio, Texas. Dairy producers, processors/handlers, equipment/supply manufacturers, and organization personnel will participate in the two-day meeting at the Hyatt Regency San Antonio.

The purpose of the annual meeting, held every spring, is to present stewardship reports on UDIA promotional programs to the organization's House of Delegates. Programs approved at last fall's House of Delegates meeting will be previewed. These include "REAL" Seal sweepstakes campaign for June Dairy Month and plans for a fall Cheese Jamboree.

Locally promotion programs are conducted by the Advertising and Promotion Agency/Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Area. The Agency will be sending eight representatives of the region's milk marketing cooperatives as delegates to UDIA's annual meeting.

UDIA's total promotion program includes advertising and marketing services, nutrition research and education programs, and product and process research and development projects. Education seminars covering these and other program areas will be conducted on March 30 and 31.

Associated Milk Producers, Inc. (Southern Region), Arlington, Texas, one of 20 UDIA member organizations, will act as host for the meeting. Based in Rosemont, Illinois, UDIA is the nation's largest dairy promotion organization, representing about 94 percent of the country's dairy farmers and 85 percent of the milk marketed.

COME TO A LIVESTOCK HEALTH AND NITRATE WATER MEETING
by a specialist from Indiana
MONDAY, MARCH 19, 1984 at 7:30 p.m. at Leola Family Restaurant, 4 miles east of Lancaster on Rt. 23 (north side). Tell friends and neighbors who have livestock health and water problems.

Our N.E.M.A. Vitamin C (by National Environmental Marketing Associates, Inc.) fresh in water is just what your livestock and poultry needs for health because Vit. C oxidizes in feed (loses value). We have excellent testimonies on livestock and poultry, ¼ lb. more broilers, laying flocks resistent to flu, etc. People respond to Vit. C. Why shouldn't livestock?

Our N.E.M.A. Vit. C has a double purpose. In addition to supplying the much needed and lacking nutrition (Vit. C) it also takes the nitrate out of water. What a discovery! Come to the meeting and hear the specialist, and bring your nitrate questions.

BETTER CROPS

A higher and pure power (the Creator) helps our customers get larger and more nutritious crops than their neighbors at less cost by nitrogen fixation out of the air, and earthworm castings (almost unbelievable amount). And their holes bored in the soil and subsoil hold moisture like a sponge from the spring rains unto the summer drought. It makes sense and dollars. Our customers prove that natural fertilizer is superior to man's modern methods. Two had 27% protein haylage, two had 22% to 23% protein hay, a 40 lb. watermelon, 9.9 lb. cantaloupe, they grow good, healthy cantaloupes by the acre without chemical sprays. And they don't pollute their fellow men's water. Are you a Bible believer or not. They report their livestock are so healthy and take less feed per pound of meat. Not needing to spray their hay helps animal health too, as well as your bank account. You don't need a computer — your 6 yr. old boy can tell which pays best. Literature on all products gladly sent. Ask for pictures of crops raised in the 1983 drought.

NATURAL MASTITIS TREATMENTS — Resistance through missing elements Excellent proof. Many repeat orders. 200 tables, 18.95. For stubbor cases add $29.95 or $13.95 all three work together Many written testimonials, quantity discounts.

Hot new livestock health product. Demand will automatically get big. Distributorships available to sell to dealers. Be first in your area.

Grassland FFA celebrates 25th anniversary

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

NEW HOLLAND — "I remember we had our first banquet in the high school cafeteria.

"Things have sure changed since then."

With these words, Robert Freeman, R1 Denver, recalled the organizational year of the Grassland, FFA Chapter in the Eastern Lancaster County School District. Owner of a plumbing business, Freeman served as charter president of the chapter.

On Friday, March 9, Freeman joined numerous other Grassland FFA alumni, community leaders from the local, county and state levels, current members and parents and a number of program supporters in observing the 25th anniversary of the Grassland FFA Chapter.

In all, more than 450 attended the silver anniversary banquet. The large number was divided between the New Holland and Blue Ball fire halls for the banquet and then convened in the high school auditorium for the awards program.

It was a night of reminiscing for the FFA graduates, recalling moments from their ag shop days or trips to Kansas City.

Before they have moved on to varying careers in production agriculture, agribusiness and other lines of endeavor, the quarter-century of Grassland FFA'ers have achieved an enviable record in their Blue and Gold jackets. Some of these achievements were cited at the anniversary program.

In recognizing those attending from each of the graduating classes, it was pointed out that the chapter has had one national officer, 13 state officers, 27 county officers, 12 recipients of the American Degree and 138 Keystone Degree recipients.

And over the past quarter-century there have been many who have received countless other awards, including the coveted "stars." Honored this year as the chapter's stars were:

Brian Gingrich and Earl Sauder – Star Greenhands.

Floyd Huber, Star Chapter Farmer; and Darryl Weaver, Star Chapter Agribusinessman.

David Fisher, Star Red Rose Agribusinessman; Margaret Herr and Nelson Horning, Star Red Rose Farmers.

Scott Bailey – Star Grassland Farmer.

In addition, 14 first-year chapter members received their Greenhand Degrees, 17 received Chapter Degrees, 14 were honored with their Red Rose Degrees and six with their Keystone Degree, including Scott Bailey, Gerald Baker, Lamar King, Kevin Martin, Ernest Mast and Michael Weaver.

Among the tributes paid the chapter was the following letter sent by Sec. of Agriculture John Block:

"Congratulations on 25 years of service to the agricultural community of the Eastern Lancaster County School District. As a former FFA member, the father of an FFA member and the member of an agricultural community, I know fully the tremendous contributions of the FFA to the individual, the parents and the community.

"I wish the very best to you and the others gathered to celebrate the anniversary of the Grassland FFA Chapter. Although I cannot be there with you tonight, I am with you in the spirit of the Future Farmers of America believing strongly in the future of farming with a faith borne not out of words but of deeds.

"Best wishes for continued success."

In her address to her home chapter members, Carolyn Witmer, State FFA president, reminded the Grasslanders of three important words – faith, hope and love – that will be vital throughout their lives.

Featured speaker for the evening was Sam Hayes, Minority Whip of the Pa. House of Representatives. Former president of the Warriors Mark FFA in Huntingdon County, Hayes received his Honorary American Degree a couple of years ago.

"America is economically and morally underpinned by agriculture," he said.

"The true test of civilization, as Emerson has said, is not the size of its cities or crops but the kind of men and women it turns out.

"Tonight we've seen many who have gone out from this FFA Chapter to places of leadership in agriculture and in their communities.

"This chapter is one of the great ag organizations in the state.

"But yesterday's successes do not preserve the future of this chapter, county, state or nation.

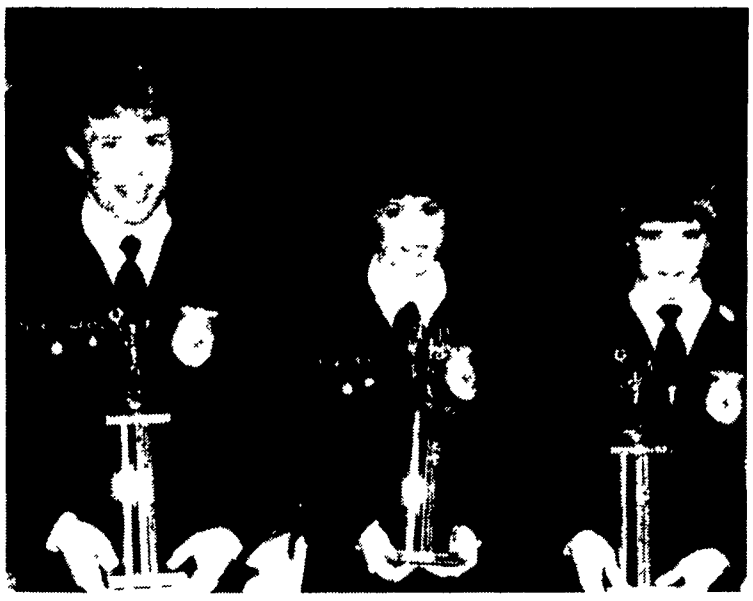
"It's not just the cows and alfalfa and such that are good measures of what can be produced. It's the men and women that make the difference.

"During the next 25 years, be faithful to agriculture – it truly underpins our society.

"Be faithful to the FFA Motto.

"And remember that learning never stops."

Trio of presidents at the 25th anniversary banquet of the Grassland FFA Chapter include, from the left, Robert Freeman, R1 Denver, charter president; Sam Hayes, featured speaker and Minority Whip of the State House of Representatives who served as president of the Warriors Mark FFA in 1957-58 in Huntingdon County; and Marlin Mast, current Grassland president.



Red Rose Stars of Grassland FFA are, from the left, David Fisher, Agribusiness; Margaret Herr and Nelson Horning, Star Red Rose Farmers.

Scott Bailey is the Star Grassland Farmer.

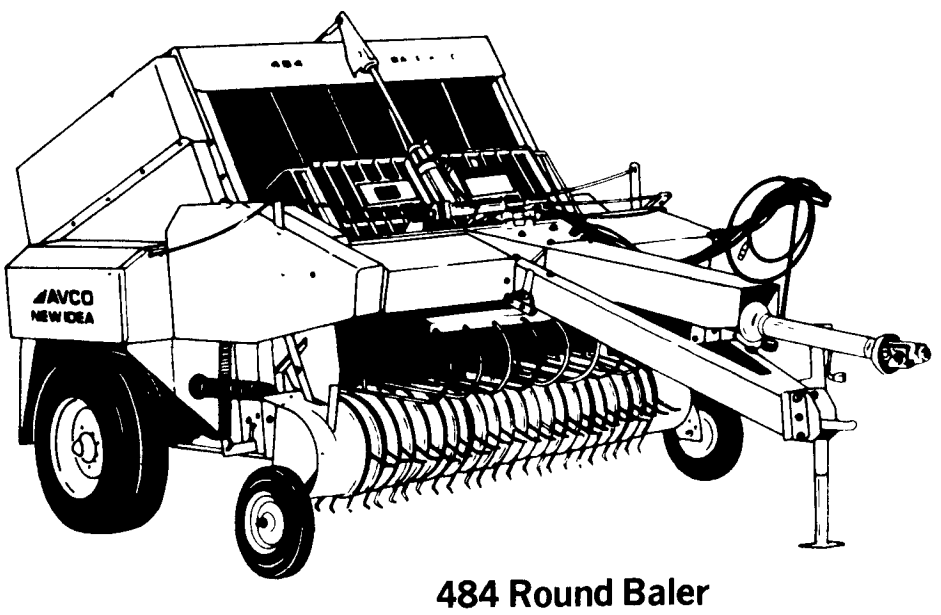
KEEPING AMERICA ON THE GROW

"It's a fact. We haven't found anything we can't bale."

Strong on Value!

Fact: Now you can make better bales. Model 484 makes a bale 5 x 4 ft. weighing up to 900 lbs. Bale weight depends on crop.

Fact: The Model 484 allows you to eject bales without backing away from the windrow. You spend more time baling, less time backing.



484 Round Baler

Fact: The Avco New Idea fixed baling chamber with open throat design has fewer moving parts and more positive bale starting in any crop (hay, straw, corn stalks and other crop residues) than variable chamber designs. Simple design means less trouble, more production and easier operation.

Fact: Avco New Idea bales have centers that "breathe" to promote better curing, preserve nutrient value and make it easier for livestock to eat. The tightly wrapped outer shell works to resist moisture and reduce spoilage.

Fact: You really should see these new balers. Visit us soon!

Animal biopsies improved

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Researchers at the University of Maryland's Agricultural Experiment Station (UMAES) have developed a new biopsy method that should allow veterinarians to examine live animal tissue without using major surgery.

The procedure involves so little trauma to the animal, say the researchers, that periodic and repeated biopsies at intervals as short as four weeks are possible.

"This procedure, which we call a 'nondestructive' biopsy method, should become an important addition to our diagnostic and research arsenal," says Dr. Theodore H. Belling, Jr., a visiting associate professor with Maryland and Virginia's Regional College of Veterinary Medicine at Maryland's College Park campus.

Belling and Maryland assistant professor Dr. Michael J. Glade were principal investigators on the UMAES research project.

Belling and Glade said they developed the procedure so they could study abnormalities in cartilage growth in young thoroughbred horses.

The 30-minute procedure involves sedating the animal, adminstering a "field block" to deaden nerves in a small localized area, making a 1-inch incision, and removing a small plug of cartilage tissue, according to Belling and Glade.

The small incision is then closed and wrapped with gauze and tape, they explain.

After one day of supervised confinement, animals can be turned out into exercise pens, according to the two scientists.

"The research that led to this development is important because many young thoroughbreds suffer leg deformities that are the result of abnormalities in leg cartilage growth," Dr. Belling says.

"If we understand how these abnormalities come about, we may be able to develop way to prevent them," he says.

"Before we can understand these abnormalities, though, we have to have some way to examine the abnormal tissues.

"This procedure allows us to do so with a minimum amount of discomfort to the animal and little inconvenience to a practicing veterinarian," adds Belling.

Up to now, techniques available to obtain and study living tissue in live animals were limited, and ofter required major surgery.

Livestock spray approved

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Anchor Laboratories announces Federal EPA approval of Permectrin II for direct application to beef and dairy cattle, swine, poultry, horses, and pets or their premises.

Producers can spray Permectrin II or 25% Wettable Powder on livestock to control face flies, horn flies, horseflies, stable flies, mosquitoes, lice, mites, fleas and ticks on animals. Both products can also be used on premise surfaces to control house flies, stable flies, spiders, mosquitoes, and fleas.

Permectrin II provides longer residual control on premises than many other insect sprays. This results in fewer applications and less cost for the producer. In addition, the product's flexible dilution rates adapt to a variety of animal and premise uses.

Conservation slide show available

LANCASTER — Lancaster County is one of 23 counties in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Delaware receiving special help from the U.S. Department of Agriculture for controlling soil erosion. A new 11½ minute slide show, explaining the problem and looking at solutions in the Mason-Dixon Erosion Control area, is now available for showing to farm and civic groups.

"Soil erosion is threatening the long-term productivity of some of our best farmland," says Clifford Bienko, Soil Conservation Service. "We are targeting special technical and cost-share assistance to areas that have critical erosion problems".

According to Bienko, soil loss on cropland in the target area averages about 18 tons per acre annually. That's about five times greater than scientists consider allowable. Not only is this an economic loss for farmers, it also creates a water quality problem. Sediment, and the nutrients attached to it, has been identified as one of the major sources of nonpoint pollution to the Cheasapeake Bay.

Bienko says the Mason-Dixon slide show is available free, on loan, to farm, civic and school groups. To schedule it, contact the Lancaster Soil Conservation Service Office at (717) 299-1563.
